STANFIELD
. . . gone by 1976

Tory Chief To Quit

OTTAWA (CP) — Robert Stanfield announced today he will step down within two years as national Progressive Conservative leader and will not run in the next federal election.

He told a news conference after the first party caucus since its July 8 election defeat that he agreed to stay on for an indefinite period as leader after caucus members approved conditions he demanded.

He said he set three specific conditions on continuing on an interim basis:

—That he would not lead the party in another election unless one were called unexpectedly, ahead of the expected timing in 1978.

—That he be free to pick his own departure date on the basis of his judgment of what is best for the party.

—That he not be limited to any set period for continuing in office, such as six months or a year or some other fixed length of time.

He said his position was given broad general approval by the caucus, although consent was not unanimous.

"I did not expect unanimity; I did not demand unanimity."

Mr. Stanfield, elected leader in 1967 and defeated in three elections, said he made up his mind to resign well before the caucus meeting.

Having done so, he said, he leans toward an early resignation. But he would make the decision after assessing carefully what would be best for the party.

He said it is reasonable to assume that his departure will come before the next general party convention which must, by the party's constitution, be held by March, 1976.

The last convention was in March this year and the constitution stipulates that a general convention must be held every two years.

It also contains a clause for an automatic leadership review by ordering that a poll be taken on whether delegates favor a leadership convention.

Mr. Stanfield said he would quit and leave the party leaderless if he ever lost the substantial support of his caucus. But he would not let a small group of caucus dissidents upset his plan to stay on until a leadership convention can be arranged.

Thanks A Lot, Dave

Sheila Hobbs of 674 Grenville had a few problems returning home from work Tuesday afternoon.

While driving along Esquimalt Road her car, "an old junker," stalled, blocking a long line of traffic.

She got out and saw "a big beautiful gold car" stopped behind her.

"See if our bumpers meet," the man in the car said.

They did.

He got her started, but the car stalled a second time, so he gave her another push.

This time she looked at the man and "could hardly believe my eyes."

"Thanks a lot, Dave," she called out with a wave of her hand.

Premier Dave . . . Barrett, that is.

GREEKS QUIT NATO

Turkish Blitz Attack Cuts Cyprus in Half

Times News Services

Turkey overran much of eastern Cyprus today with massive air, artillery and tank attacks that levelled the industrial area of Nicosia, surrounded UN troops at the Nicosia airport and smashed to within five miles of the Greek Cypriot port of Famagusta.

The attacks all but cut Cyprus in two.

The United Nations announced a cease-fire had been agreed in the capital of Nicosia tonight, but firing continued after it went into effect.

The attacks brought Greece and Turkey close to war and threatened to collapse NATO's southern flank but Turkish Premier Bulent Ecevit, in announcing Turkish victories, said in Ankara he believed the attacks would not bring a Turkish-Greek war.

Greece announced it was withdrawing its armed forces from NATO for its failure to prevent what it called a Turkish Pearl Harbor, and Athens reports said the Greek army had been placed on a full war footing along the 99-mile frontier with Turkey.

The 14 other members of NATO pleaded with Greece to reconsider its action — which could mean the removal of U.S. nuclear deterrents from Greece — and called on Turkey to respect the cease-fire ordered by the UN security council. The pleas had no effect.

The Geneva talks collapsed early today and Britain called an urgent session of the security council in New York at 3:30 a.m. EDT. The council required only 120 minutes to pass a unanimous resolution asking for a cease-fire.

Dispatches from Nicosia and monitorings of the Greek and Turkish Cypriot radios there told of massive Turkish tank thrusts eastward from Nicosia toward the post of Famagusta and westward toward the port of Lefka drives that would seal off northern Cyprus and effectively partition Cyprus by military force.

Beginning at dawn, wave after wave of American-made Phantom fighter-bombers of the Turkish air force streaked out of the sun to bomb and strafe the capital while Turkish artillery hammered Greek Cypriot positions in the Kyrenian mountain range about 15 miles to the north.

The Austrian defence ministry announced that three soldiers of the Austrian UN peacekeeping force were killed in the air raid.

Radio Nicosia, monitored in Israel, also said Turkish planes bombed Famagusta.

Bombs burst through the industrial section at the east end of Nicosia. It burned for hours, sending up a tower of black smoke into the clear blue sky, and industrialists who took refuge in a hotel said the damage will cripple the island's economy for years.

The heaviest fighting centered at Mia Milea, two miles northeast of Nicosia, and near the airport about five miles southwest of the capital where strong Turkish forces cut off two vital road junctions and encircled the damaged installation, a UN spokesan said.

The eruption of renewed warfare following the July 22 cease-fire wounded 20 UN soldierd, including six Finns who have been under a constant mortar barrage at their camp

EXECUTIVE FLY GUN JUST $15

TORONTO (CP) — Tired of hunting flies with an ordinary fly swatter?

An item on display at the Fall Gift Show here may be the answer. It's an executive fly shooter, costing $15.

Shaped like a gun, the shooter is constructed so that a plastic fly swatter springs out when the trigger is pressed.

NEWS BRIEFS

RECORD TOMATO GREW TO MUSIC

EASTBOURNE, England (UPI) — Charlie Roberts, 62, claimed a world record today for growing a tomato weighing 4¼ pounds. Roberts said he encouraged its growth by fitting headphones around it and playing it stereo music all day long.

Air Crash Kills 44

PORLAMAR, Venezuela (UPI) — A Venezuelan commercial plane, carrying 44 passengers and four crew members crashed into a hill today while trying to land in foul weather on the island of Margarita. Initial reports said there were no survivors. The Linea Aropostal Venezuelana (LA) Viscount prop-jet had left Caracas' Maiquetia airport on a regular flight, making stops at two eastern Venezuelan cities before heading for Margarita.

$25 Million Issue

B.C. Hydro today offered $25 million in parity bonds carrying 8½ per cent interest.

In announcing the new issue, Premier Barrett said the government is actually reducing the amount of parity bonds with the $25 million issue, instead of the $50 million usually issued at this time each year.

More Ulster Deaths

BELFAST (AP) — A bomb exploded Tuesday at an army post near the border with the Irish Republic, killing two British soldiers and seriously wounding two others, the army said. The post at Crossmaglen had not been used for several days and the men, Royal Marines, had just entered it while on foot patrol, the army said.

KELLY, DOUGLAS PROFITS TRIPLE

VANCOUVER (CP) — Kelly, Douglas and Co. Ltd. reported record sales and tripled profits for the first half of this year.

The food manufacturing, wholesale and retail corporation that operates Super-Valu stores and produces Nabob brand foods, reported that sales in the 24-week period ended June 15 increased to $209.6 million this year, compared with sales of $131.5 million in the same period last year.

Net earnings were $1.567 million or 60 cents a share, compared with $553,000 or 21 cents a share in the first six months of 1973.

President Victor F. MacLean said the net margin of earnings rose to .75 of one per cent of sales from .42 or one per cent a year ago.

Bottle exchanger Logie can't cash in

Empties Going Up

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

The deposit price for beer bottles, long 25 cents a case, is going to 60 cents, the Times has learned.

That makes 10 cases of empties worth $6, up from $2.50.

Buying 10 dozen beer now will result in a net profit of $3.50 on the bottles, when the price rises although it leaves the problem of what to do with 120 full bottles of beer.

One Victorian with a corner on the beer bottle market is not in a position to cash in on the price increase. Jake Logie, owner of Victoria Bottle Exchange, said he can only store 16,000 dozen empties at his depot at 640 Discovery Street.

Because he handles 70,000 dozen in a month, the bottles must go out to breweries almost as fast as they come in.

W. A. Bruce, chairman of the liquor administration board, confirmed that breweries are seeking an increase in the deposit rate for empties.

He said he expects the deposit rate to change at the time the cabinet rules on an application from breweries to increase the price of beer.

At present a dozen beer sells $3, with $2.75 for the product and 25 cents on the bottles. The breweries want the price to go to $3.55 a dozen, with $2.95 for the product and 60 cents for the bottles.

This might be rounded off to $3.50.

In Vancouver, spokesman for a major brewery said: "We are looking for a 60 cent deposit rate in September."

He said the 25 cent rate has been in effect since before the Second World War and no longer reflects the value of the bottles.

"Also a quarter doesn't mean as much as it used to."

British Columbia would become the second province with 5 cent deposit rate on beer bottles. Saskatchewan made the change to 60 cents a dozen on Aug. 1.

Indian Band Ringed

Times News Services

KENORA, Ont. — Armed policemen today ringed Anicinabe Park where militant Ojibway Indians defied a government ultimatum and continued a three-week occupation of the land, which they claim is rightfully theirs.

The next move is uncertain as the armed occupation of Anicinabe Park enters its fourth week. (Pictures, Page 3.)

The Indians say they will defend the park with the assortment of weapons they say they have.

But legal authorities say the amnesty protecting the occupying Indians from prosecution is over, and police will seal off the park.

Road blocks have been set up by the police Tuesday in their promised siege of the 14-acre park but the 150 or so Indians continue to patrol the park perimeter with rifles in hand.

The Indians, led by the Ojibway Warrior Society, have said they will defend what they say is their land.

The provincial government, however, has issued an ultimatum which expired at noon Tuesday, advising the Indians that unless they left the park by the deadline, criminal charges would be brought against them.

Four persons were arrested Tuesday as the deadline expired and they attempted to leave the park. But beyond that, the police have remained in the background, maintaining road blocks and patrols but staying away from any direct confrontation.

"What is left in the park now is the hard core," warned Louis Cameron, leader of the occupation.

"We have chosen to die here. This is our blood and our flesh."

Title to the park has been at the centre of negotiations so far. The Indians say the park land was purchased with Indian funds and sold to the town without authority in 1959.

BOOK IN U.S. ONLY FOR CANADIAN HOTEL

WATERTON PARK, Alta. — Persons wanting to book a room at the Prince of Wales Hotel in Waterton Lakes National Park must apply to an office in Glacier, Montana and a Calgary man is fighting mad about it.

Bill Perks, dean of environmental design at the University of Calgary, fired off a sizzling protest to Jud Buchanan, minister of northern affairs and Indian development, and he's set to raise a ruckus until he gets action.

Don Hummel, president of Glazier Inc., which handles reservations for six hotels including the one in Canada, said the Prince of Wales front desk staff would be "hopelessly confused" if room booking were handled otherwise.

A tourist arriving at an information office in the park can see the hotel on the brow of a nearby hill. But when he asks for a room he is told he must make a 45-60 cent call to Glacier.

72 Starving Stowaways Found on Banana Steamer

NEW YORK (UPI) — In what federal agents called "the largest roundup of South American stowaways in 30 years," some 72 chilled and emaciated Colombians and Ecuadorians were arrested Tuesday when the banana steamer "Santa Ilena" docked at a Brooklyn pier.

At least six of the aliens were sent to public health hospital on Staten Island for treatment of malnutrition and overexposure — the result of seven days in the refrigerated holds of the 12,000-ton Prudential-Grace Line freighter.

"Its the largest roundup of Latin American stowaways in 30 years in New York," a U.S. customs official said.

Dozens of customs and immigration agents boarded the cargo ship shortly after 6 a.m. when it tied up at Pier 39 on the Brooklyn waterfront, tipped by ship's personnel that there were stowaways aboard.

Ripping open hatches to the ship's holds, loaded with hundreds of banana stems from Ecuador, the agents were greeted by dozens of shivering stowaways, many of them wearing winter coats as protection against the chill of the giant refrigerators.

Fred S. Boyett, regional commissioner of customs, said others were found in the engine room.

Boyett said the vessel entered New York harbor early this morning under the surveillance of a U.S. Customs Service helicopter and a patrol boat.

He said the stowaways all from Ecuador or Colombia apparently boarded the ship at Buenaventura, Colombia and at Guayaquil, Ecuador, where the ship stopped to load bananas.

Customs agents said the crew first became aware of the stowaways when 10 men emerged from holds as the ship entered the Panama Canal at Balboa. The 10 were captured and put ashore.

When the ship reached the Atlantic, officials said, other stowaways were seen wandering topside. The ship then radioed New York for agents to provide help.

Violinist Virtual Prisoner

PERTH, Australia (UPI) — Russian violinist Georgi Ermolenko was a virtual prisoner in his hotel today because of the refusal of Australia's unionized airline ticket agents to believe he really wanted to go back to the Soviet Union.

Union officials said they would refuse to let him leave until he thinks it over for at least another 24 hours.

The 18-year-old musician insisted that he had voluntarily withdrawn his request for political asylum in Australia.

"Russia is my homeland and without my homeland I cannot live," Ermolenko told reporters through an interpreter. "I want to go back to my homeland."

The airline clerks for two days have refused to sell tickets for Ermolenko and other Soviet officials to leave Australia.

Ermolenko arrived Aug. 2 in Perth with the Soviet delegation to the Conference of the International Society for Music Education held at Perth University. Two days later he applied for political asylum.

But after a talk with his group leader it was announced he had changed his mind.

Airport workers refused to issue tickets to the Russians on both Monday and Tuesday.

"We are going to stick to our guns right down the line," said Jim Harding, an official of the clerks union. "We want him to have 24 hours on his own away from Russian influence."

Harding said he talked with Ermolenko and was more convinced than ever the violinist was under duress.

Ermolenko stared at him constantly, he said.

"I found it a traumatic experience," he said. "It seemed as if he had identified that I represented some ray of hope."

Eastern Cities Still Limping

Times News Services

Transportation in Canada's two largest cities limped along today as an illegal strike by Montreal subway employees entered its second week and a walkout by Toronto transit drivers shut down all bus, subway and streetcar operations there for a third day.

With no end in sight to either strike, residents used their cars, their feet, their thumbs and their ingenuity to get to work.

There was additional concern in Toronto today as the 96th Canadian National Exhibition opened a 20-day run. Officials said the Ex stands to take a $1-million beating in ticket sales alone if the transport tie-up lasts another week.

Businessmen in suits were seen bicycling to the office with briefcases slung over their handlebars. In Toronto, bicycle traffic was so heavy one entire lane of a major street was given over to the cyclists.

TENNIS BATTLE LOOMING

Oak Bay Mayor Brian Smith said today he will challenge Victoria Mayor Peter Pollen to a friendly tennis match later this month to mark the opening of Oak Bay's new courts at Henderson Park.

"He'll probably beat me," said Smith, a tennis booster, but he added that he appreciates Pollen's efforts to support tennis programs. So he will invite him to the official opening and to a match.

The three new courts, which have been in use for about two weeks, will have lighting installed later for night play.

INQUIRY REJECTED

Cominco mines has rejected a request from Labor Minister Bill King for an industrial inquiry commissioner into the six-week old strike by 4,000 members of the United Steel Workers Union of America.

King requested the appointment Tuesday but received the company's decision this morning. "They have indicated they are not prepared to accept a commissioner; they wish continued mediation be undertaken," said King.

near the airport, the spokesman said.

He said UN troops did not enter combat and they would not fire unless attacked at the airport, where four British UN troops have been wounded in Turkish bombing runs. UN forces took control of the airport following the three-day July war and said they would defend it even if attacked.

The Greek Cypriot government headed by President Glafkos Clerides filed a complaint to the United Nations describing the outbreak of fighting as a "dastardly, unprovoked aggression and indiscriminate bombing of Nicosia and its suburbs," the spokesman said.

The developments in Cyprus caused a reaction in world financial circles. Stock markets in London, Zurich, Frankfurt and New York all tumbled — hitting a 15-year low in London and sending the Dow Jones industrial average skidding 12.67 points to 743.74.

European market experts estimated that 900 million pounds, about $2.1 billion, had been wiped off the market value of securities during the day — nearly $5 billion so far this week.

In other developments: The Danish defence command said Denmark's 435-man United Nations peace force contingent abandoned all outposts and withdrew to its base camps in northewestern Cyprus after hostilities flared there at dawn.

—The Royal Air Force began an airlift of civilians from the war-torn Mediterranean island, the second one in four weeks, and ferried in marine commando reinforcements.

—Prime Minister Harold Wilson broke off a vacation in the Scilly Isles and returned to his No. 10 Downing Street official residence, where he was joined by Foreign Secretary James Callaghan returning from the failed Cyprus peace talks in Geneva. UN Secretary General Kurt Waldheim, enroute from Salzburg to New York, scheduled a stopover in London to meet with Callaghan.

The whole of the airspace over the eastern Mediterranean was closed because of the resumption of fighting in Cyprus, aviation sources said in Beirut. But a London spokesman for Israel's El Al said it was operating in and out of Tel Aviv. He said all other 17 international airlines had stopped services to Tel Aviv and El Al was putting on extra flights to help stranded passengers.

—A Canadian Forces personell carrier received an indirect hit in the fighting, an external affairs department spokesman said in Ottawa. But sources on the island said there were no Canadian casualties. A radio report said 19 UN soldiers, 15 of them Finns, were wounded.

Insurance Mix-Up Puts Miner on Welfare

CAMPBELL RIVER Thirty-six-year-old miner John Hussey has had to go on welfare because an insurance company has stopped sickness indenmity payments.

And Hussey, who is president of the United Steelworkers of America local at Western Mines at Myra Creek halfway between Campbell River and Gold River, doesn't like it one bit.

In 18 years of mining, starting at Sudbury, he said he's only lost three or four days a year "which is a very good attendance record."

A spokesman for Great West Life Assurance Company in Vancouver declined comment this morning pending discussion this afternoon with Hussey's doctor.

Hussey picked up his first welfare benefit, for $180, a few days ago but it's strictly on a loan basis as far as he is concerned.

"I told them as soon as I get the insurance money I'd return it," he said.

He has been off work almost five months and the last payment from the insurance company was June 27.

"It took six weeks to get the first cheque," he said.

Hussey, who has worked at Western Mines for 5½ years, said he had to move from heavy mining work to lighter work because of arthritis and bursitis.

The last March "they took me off the regular job to a 54 degree raise,"

He protested he couldn't do this work with bursitis. He went off sick twice and finally hasn't worked since.

The $90 a week sickness indemnity plan is provided in the union's contract with the mining company and the benfit is for 52 weeks.

Hussey said the mining company told him the insurance comapnny wanted more information about his sickness but "they didn't write to my doctor but a different doctor. I don't know why."

Meanwhile, his own doctor was away on vacation and has only just returned.

Hussey is angry at having to apply for welfare.

"Welfare is for the needy who have no insurance policy in case of injury or sickness. This is all wrong but I'm getting pretty hungry," he said.

OKANAGAN WEEDS STRANGLING SHORE

KELOWNA (CP) — The 10-mile Lake Okanagan shoreline of Kelowna and Vernon will be strangled with aquatic weed growth within two years, says the Okanagan Basin Water Board secretary-manager.

Bill Parchomchuk said Monday the 80-mile-long lake will be choked lifeless if something isn't done soon to check the spread of weeds now infesting waters around Kelowna and Vernon.

He told a meeting of Kelowna city council that weeds had spread from only a few acres when first reported near Vernon in 1971 to an area covering more than 200 acres this year, and may cause property value losses of about $2 million within the next year.

Amin's Ex-Wife Cut Up

KAMPALA (AP) — The dismembered body of one of President Idi Amin's former wives has been found in the trunk of a car that belonged to a doctor who died after poisoning himself, his wife and their seven children, Radio Uganda reported today.

The radio, quoting a health ministry spokesman and police, said the body of Amin's ex-wife, Kay Adroa, was found Tuesday. An autopsy showed death was caused by bleeding from an incomplete abortion, the health ministry spokesman said.

Adroa, said to have been three or four months pregnant, was the sister of former foreign affairs minister Lt.-Col. Ondoga, whose body was found floating in the River Nile several months ago.

Police said they believe the doctor, identified as Peter Mbalu Mukaasa, committee suicide Monday after performing the illegal abortion on Adroa.

Police said a servant told them Mukasa forced his wife and their seven children to swallow poison tablets Sunday. Police found the family Monday. The children and wife were unconscious but now are recovering in Mulago hospital, police said.

Adroa was divorced by Amin last year.

Back Them With Real Authority

On this page today a dispatch from William R. Frye at the United Nations Headquarters in New York discusses the predicament of the UN police force on Cyprus and the possible repercussions which could appear elsewhere.

The Turkish invading forces on the island have repeatedly ignored United Nations patrols and observation posts and hampered UN efforts to supervise the truce or even to aid civilians. UN troops have been ordered out of various sections of the island by Turkish commanders and lacking sufficient numbers and armament and under instructions not to become a part of the Turkish-Greek hostilities, they have complied.

The result has been not only to reduce the effectiveness of the UN force but seriously to impair its appearance and prestige. This impairment can carry far beyond the island of Cyprus. Mr. Frye raises the question of how Israel will view the dependability of UN promises of protection in light of the spectacle of UN impotence when faced by aggressive Turkish action on Cyprus.

Clearly, the United Nations must make up its mind — or its scores of minds — on the question of police actions. If they are to be continued they must be made binding and effective, and UN troops in the field — wherever it may be — must be treated with the respect which a world-wide international authority should carry. It will not be desirable, or possible, for UN forces necessarily to assert their authority through weight of arms — their purpose is not to wage war.

But any opposing nation should know that disregard of UN authority, once it has been established in a theatre of conflict, will bring a swift reply, if not military then diplomatic or economic, backed by the full strength of the global organization. A UN roadblock, a UN observation post or patrol would then be obeyed and enabled to perform its function, which essentially would be to cool the conflict and maintain a ceasefire until truce agreements could be achieved.

Only with such prestige can UN forces carry out their duties and extend to other countries the guarantee that their presence will be authoritative and effective. By fumbling from incident to incident, no matter how courageous and well trained the troops themselves may be, the UN can only lose respect and validity.

The answer to this problem should not be a defeatist, negative move to "bring our boys back home" and let hostile situations slide from bad to worse. The answer should be a positive one: to give UN forces the direct support and authority that will make them fully effective.

Canada, as a middle power with reduced national defences, obviously should support any move to bolster the UN peace-keeping function and make it dominant in the world. So far, the UN concept is the best that has been offered as a means of maintaining global peace and preventing local conflicts from spreading. In a nuclear age, that should be a major concern of all nations. It is foolhardy to permit the policing role to falter for lack of active, purposeful support.

". . . I'd like you all to meet Jason Romnik . . . he's one of the middlemen who have been busy nibbling away at your food dollar . . ."

Shortages

Provincial Conservative leader Scott Wallace's announcement that his party is in deep financial trouble is akin to Noah's complaining that it looks like rain — it covers only a smidgen of the situation. The deficiencies of the B.C. Conservatives must certainly be financial, but they can also be described as ideological, anthropological, numerical, directional and omnipresent.

Other parties have stolen not only their voters, but also their MLAs and their policies where these could be detected. To cap it all, the Conservatives have chosen as leader an energetic, driving man whose chief political attribute is his success as a rebel, critic and intransigent. As leader he must eventually turn and denounce himself on a point of principle, if his record to date is to be followed. And indeed he has in effect already done this — although since recanting — by trying to abandon his party in favor of a unity movement.

Yes, the provincial Conservatives have a financial problem. But money won't buy what they need.

Ford Sets His Goal

President Ford's announced struggle against inflation, his nation's most pressing problem, will be watched with interest — perhaps even emulation—in Canada.

While calling on Congress to help him in his endeavor, President Ford did not indicate a policy, except to refer in general terms to the fact that he could hardly call on the public to spend less if the government itself did not follow the same advice. He made it clear that government departments would have difficulty in getting increased budgets past him and promised a balanced national budget by 1977.

But the means by which the battle would be waged will apparently rest with a council of experts who will be convened in a summit meeting to examine the whole situation.

Although the new president in effect promised reduced government spending, he also said in his speech that he would not stint on defence expenditures, and education would get large grants previously vetoed by President Nixon. He also called for a cost of living council to examine price increases, although without control powers.

President Ford at least understands the need for action on inflation, but like governments elsewhere he has not yet devised a solution. He must be given credit for his intentions, at any rate, and certainly a fervent wish for success which could blaze a trail for other countries. On the basis of his announced concern, President Ford might also be open to assist in joint international action, and then a real break-through might be made.

HAROLD GREER

Why Shorten the Campaigns?

TORONTO — A Commons committee on electoral reform is to be established early in the next Parliament, the main object being to find ways of shortening federal election campaigns.

That election campaigns should be shorter is a proposition which no doubt enjoys widespread support. Prime Minister Trudeau thinks so, as do most politicians whenever they are asked the question, as they frequently are. Indeed, the idea is so acceptable that Mr. Geoffrey Stevens, the Ottawa columnist of The Globe and Mail, has confidently begun a useful series of articles on how campaigns can be shortened with the promise that "everyone" agrees that Canadian election campaigns are "too long, far too long."

Well, no. Not everyone. Not this observer. And not, I suspect, many of the candidates who have been through the mill of trying to get elected to Parliament. This thrust for shorter campaigns ought to be seriously re-examined; it is, I suggest, essentially undemocratic.

Not Specified

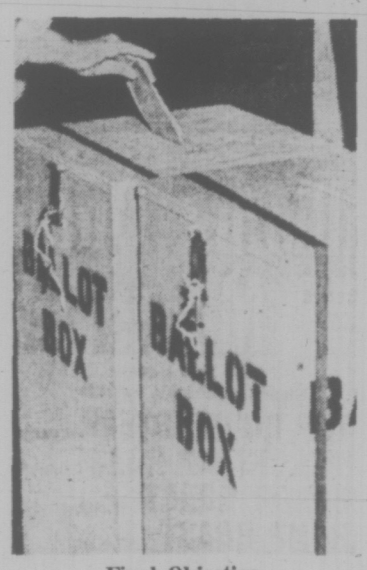
The Canada Elections Act does not specify a minimum period for campaigns, although it is clear that something in excess of 47 days is required to meet all the provisions of the electoral law. Chief Electoral Officer Jean-Marc Hamel has said he needs at least 58 days to run an election as the law now stands. The general pattern in recent years has been that federal campaigns last about 60 days.

When this is said to be "too long", what exactly is meant? No doubt it is longer than the party leaders require, with today's aircraft and computer scheduling, to visit all parts of the country. Certainly it is longer than the political reporters need to become glassy-eyed with the endlessly-repeated, no-substance speeches that characterize modern political campaigning. And it seems safe to say it is longer than the voters need, with modern communications, to receive the information available to them, assess the situation, and make up their minds.

But is it longer than a riding candidate, nominated within a few days of the writs being issued, needs to make himself or herself known in a riding where there may be 100,000 or more voters?

Obviously not. Even two months is not enough for such a candidate to cover completely a large riding and to feel at the end that he has visited enough doorsteps, shaken enough hands, spoken at enough meetings and drunk enough coffee to be at least familiar to the voters.

The reply will be made, of course, that shortening the election campaign need not prejudice the efforts of local candidates: they can simply get nominated earlier, well before the election is called, and get to work. The argument, it seems to me, is a superficial one.



Final Objective

Early nominations are a common enough practice now, especially in ridings where an "out" party sees a good chance to win if its candidate can become better known. The record does not show any positive correlation with success. The hard fact is that the great majority of voters cannot be engaged in an election until the election is called, and understandably so. Early nominations may be valuable from an organizational point of view but as part of an exercise to make an unknown candidate known, they are largely a waste of time.

Yet the "recognition" factor is probably the most important element in a candidate's success or failure. When an election is called, the first thing most voters want to know is "Who's running?", followed by, if a name is supplied, "Who's that?" To become recognizable to the voters, to have some identity no matter how tenuous, is the first law of electoral success.

This not only explains why some politicians become publicity-seekers and demagogues, it explains why it is much easier to get re-elected than elected, why representatives from the less-populated rural ridings tend to last longer than their city colleagues, why political parties, when casting about for candidates, tend to seek known names with some "recognition" mileage on them.

It also probably explains why, with urbanization and its corollary of over-population constituencies, there has been in recent years a decided shift in emphasis from local candidates to emphasis on national leaders and national campaigns. A candidate may be virtually unknown in his constituency but still get elected simply because he is a standard-bearer, the coat-tail representative of the national leader. It is an ironic development, considering that in the fractured politics of present-day Canada, "national" leaders and "national" campaign are more fiction than fact.

Intensified Pressures

All these pressures will be intensified, it seems to me, if we shorten election campaigns significantly. There will be more mere standard-bearers, more reliance on mere "names", more emphasis on the cult of leadership, more built-in advantages for incumbents.

This surely will not make the democratic concept more real. The essence of our election law is that when the time comes to elect a new Parliament, any person who qualifies and can get enough persons to nominate him, is entitled to stand for election. It follows that he or she should have a reasonable and realistic amount of time to campaign, to become known to the voters before the vote is taken.

One of the problems of our political system, perhaps the central problem, is that we do not get, as candidates, the best men and women that society has to offer. We get the best the political parties have to offer, which can be and often is something quite different. The gap will, of course, never be bridged but we will surely not narrow it by shorter election campaigns.

WILLIAM R. FRYE

Will Apathy Kill Peace Hope?

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. — The UN peace mission in Cyprus is being frustrated and hamstrung, its men physically assaulted and its objectives undercut. And this fact risks the destruction of much more than peace on one island. It risks destruction of UN ability to help others — notably the Arabs and Israel — settle their differences and build a world of law.

UN objectives on Cyprus have run head-on into Turkish objectives. And the Turks, having a massive military superiority, have shoved the UN aside.

The principal Turkish goal has been to seize and hold a militarily defensible wedge of territory on the northern coast of Cyprus.

Out of this territory the Turks have been driving Greek-Cypriot inhabitants. Into it they apparently plan to invite or bring a substantial portion of the 100,000 Turkish Cypriots on the island (18 per cent of the population).

Strong Posture

It is a kind of imposed de facto partition — a strong posture from which to negotiate a future federated Cyprus.

In order to accomplish this result, the Turkish army which landed in Cyprus July 20 has disregarded three consecutive cease-fires: on July 22, July 23 and July 30 — the last one a standstill truce agreed to by British, Greek and Turkish foreign ministers at Geneva.

It has been the UN's thankless job to try to resist, with fewer than 4000 lightly-armed men, the objectives of a heavily-armed national force six to ten times that size.

One UN job is to patrol the buffer zone which, under the Geneva agreement, is to separate Turkish and Greek-Cypriot forces, thus helping enforce the July 30 cease-fire. This past week the Turks, expanding the territory they occupy, forced a UN unit out of the area of the prospective zone.

Another UN job is to observe and report on compliance with the ceasefire. The Turks, not wanting a spotlight focussed on their activities, have forced UN observation posts out of the Kyrenia area.

Still another UN task is the basic one of helping maintain law and order, and preventing or minimizing inter-communal violence. It thus has tried to block the forced exchange of populations. The Turks have brushed aside UN resistance.

Even the UN's humanitarian function of mitigating the worst by-products of war has run into Turkish resistance, because it would ease pressure for an exchange of populations. UN convoys with food and medical supplies for civilians have been turned back or delayed.

The Turks have not, of course, been the only offenders. The Greek Cypriot National Guard has also disregarded humanitarian concerns. Nor is the pattern of confrontation with the UN consistent. In some places, both the Turks and the Greeks are co-operating with UNFICYP, the UN army.

Must Be Respected

But the frustration and inability of UNFICYP fully to perform its functions is only too painfully apparent. And it is a serious matter, because it undermines confidence in future UN peace-keeping efforts.

Much of the world has asked Israel to rely for its security, in part at least, on international guarantees in a peace treaty, rather than strategically-located frontiers which may not prove to be negotiable.

International guarantees would include a UN army stationed between Israeli and Arab front lines — a force like the one in Cyprus and the one now patrolling disengagement agreements on the Egyptian-Israeli and Syrian-Israeli frontiers.

But to inspire confidence, such a force would have to possess more than physical power. It would in fact have little of that. It would guarantee Israel's security, and that of the Arabs, by mobilizing and focussing the moral weight of world opinion.

To make war on the adversary, either the Arabs or Israel would have to overrun the UN. (The lesson of 1967 having been learned, neither side would be able to order the UN out.) But overrunning the UN would theoretically carry with it such severe opprobrium as to be prohibitively costly to the aggressor's national interest. The UN would be a plate-glass window which no one — so the theory goes — would wish to break.

Little Outcry

The Turks in Cyprus are in danger of destroying this theory. They are in fact breaking the plate-glass window, and there has been little world outcry. If the process continues, faith in the value of the window will be shattered.

The option of mounting superior force is not open to the UN. It tried that in the Congo, and was widely criticized.

Moreover, the UN could not fight a power the size of Turkey without great-power participation, which is out of the question in Cyprus. Even the Soviet Union might decline. And much of the world, blaming the former government of Greece for the crisis, sympathizes with some of Turkey's objectives.

So what is needed is global outrage when the UN — the symbol of respect for law and human rights — is pushed around. The blue berets need more support in a frustrating and dangerous ordeal.

Tougher on the Bicyclists

We have heard a lot of talk lately about the causes of accidents on our highways, and some people have blamed speed for it. Whilst speed may have something to do with it, to my mind this is not the sole cause, in fact it is a minor cause, because it is possible to drive at a fast speed if a person is driving properly, has full control of his vehicle, ensures it is in good condition, and is a good driver.

There are two types of users of our roads that cause far more accidents than speeding motorists, one is the slowpoke that will hold up lines of traffic, and selfishly and arrogantly refuses to pull over and let others pass. Where there is a slow lane provided, this type of driver will often stick in the fast lane, with no respect, not only for the regulations in this regard, but for others behind him or her. Very severe penalties should be enacted and enforced for this type of driver.

The other menace on the road is the cyclist. Not the motorcyclist, but those that ride pedal bicycles, and I am not necessarily referring to children, though they contribute as well. Riders of bicycles do not have to have a license of any sort, nor any kind of permit for their vehicle, and they are not compelled to carry insurance. They do not use any kind of fuel in their machines, and therefore they are not contributing in any way to the cost and upkeep of the highways and by-ways, which they very often hog two and three deep, thereby becoming not only a menace to themselves but to motorists.

I feel that those using bicycles on our roads regardless of their age, should be compelled to put their machine through a test just like automobiles. They should be compelled to have some kind of license or permit to ride these machines which would be awarded to them after a test the same as is given for a driver's license. They should also be compelled to have a permit for their machine, with some kind of license plate and registration, for which they should pay, and they should also be compelled to carry insurance. This way they would not only be paying their fair share towards the cost and upkeep of the roads which they use, but would give them a greater sense of responsibility also, and I hope encourage them to use more care and common sense when using their bicycles in traffic. Bicycle riders should also be compelled to wear helmets as do motorcycle drivers. Such control of bicyclists on our roads is long overdue. — Harold Morton, P.O. Box 4223, Postal Station A.

From the Times of August 14, 1914

Practically every able-bodied male citizen of Oak Bay crowded into the municipal hall last evening, and at the close of an enthusiastic meeting enrolled as prospective special constables. The men who signed their names varied in age from 21 to 65 years, and included most of the principal residents of Oak Bay, as well as a goodly smattering of the youthful generation. Reeve Oliver was among the first to sign. He pointed out that the law expects every citizen to give his aid to the police, in all matters of law and order. The function of the body would be to act in conjunction with the official police in the maintenance of law and order. On the question of arms the reeve said little, but intimated that at present the corp would confine itself to batons.

'Shed No Tears for the Big Enchilada'

By JAMES EAYERS

Richard Nixon used to tell a poignant little tale of how, waking in the small hours, he'd think of something he ought to speak about with the president. "Then when I am fully awake, I realize that I am the president."

That's one problem behind him now.

The obsessive quest for presidential "historic firsts" as in "I am the first American president ever to pay a state visit to Jakarta" has ended in the most historic first of all.

The farewell address of the 37th president is vintage Nixon — a masterpiece of evasion. It hardly even hints at its occasion — becoming the first American president to be driven in disgrace from office.

It evokes the rhetoric of Teddy Roosevelt to summon the appealing image of the man in the arena, "who strives valiantly, who errs and comes short again because there is not effort without error and shortcoming, but who does actually strive to do the deeds."

Other quotations in the Roosevelt canon are more opposite to the Nixon experience. For example: "No man should receive a dollar unless that dollar has been fairly earned." And: "No man is justified in doing evil on the ground of expedience."

How are the mighty fallen!

The road that was to have led to the mastership-of-ceremonies at the pageantry of bicentennial has led instead to a sordid weighing of options as to how to keep his pension, how indeed to keep his freedom.

The leader who spurned amnesty for others' deeds of conscience is reduced to pleading for amnesty for his own deeds of crime. "I am not a crook" proves to be yet one more lie in the transcript of mendacity which is the record of his second administration.

Christian ethics enjoin compassion for one so grievously laid low. Christian ethics have never been harder to comply with. As the Big Enchilada — the California Mafia's mocking term for senior officials sacrificed to cover-up — bites the dust at last, it is enough to keep from gloating.

Looking back upon the Nixon presidency, it is startling to recall how much goodwill and well-wishing attended the inauguration of the most widely mistrusted politician ever sworn as chief executive.

A few among the Kennedy rat-pack, too miffed and soured to forget, withheld their grace and favor. But most Americans seemed eager for a new Nixon to emerge, purified and magnified by the lustrous setting of the White House.

So austere an intellect as George Kennan's averred that, given the chance, President Nixon might release "an outpouring of constructive energy in this country no smaller than that which occurred in England at the time of the Battle of Britain."

My own tiny mite of benediction may be found among these great expectations. Rejecting a passage which on rereading seemed wanting in generosity — "There have been cyphers in the White House before, even exclamation marks before. But never such a question-mark. The old Nixon, the new Nixon — where, oh where, is the real Nixon?" — I'd substituted one more welcoming: "James Bryce once wrote a famous essay on Why Great Men are not Chosen President. Maybe some future Bryce will write a sequel, on Why Men who are not Great Become Great Presidents. For our sake as well as his, we should hope that Nixon figures as an example."

I should have stuck with my first draft.

Soon the sycophancy that doth surround a king surrounded Richard Nixon. Far from hounding him, rounding on him, the rank and file of what Vice-President Agnew was already deriding with Nixon's approval as "an effete corps of impudent snobs" kept praising him.

Theodore (The Making of the President) White, bewitched by presidential tetes-a-tetes in Oval Room and Air Force One, wrote as if "Z" for Ziegler had dictated it: "One must respect this man: There was about all he said a conviction and a sincerity . . . An executive mind at work, with logic, force, and clarity."

Thus the central Nixon myth took hold — the myth that in the White House was a born decision-maker! Nixon the master of his fate, Nixon the captain of his soul.

That image had been propagated sedulously by Nixon himself. He had written in Six Crises — re-issued on his becoming President, and which he ordered his aides to read ". . . it makes, uh, fascinating reading . . ." — a sort of handbook for crisis managers, drawing on his own experience to tell them what to expect, how to react.

"A man learns not to worry when his muscles tense up, his nerves tingle, his stomach churns . . . He recognizes such symptoms as the natural healthy signs that his system is keyed up for battle."

Where lonely hearts columnists dispense advice on infidelities and bedwettings, Nixon instructs what to do when the roof falls in — the Ann Landers of decision-making. It boils down to "When the going gets tough, the tough gets going" — the adage of a General Patton at the end of his supply line, of Coach Lombardi on his one-yard line. Nixon psyched himself into invading Cambodia by screening "Patton," twice.

On June 23, 1973, Nixon talked cover-up with Haldeman in the Oval Office. Correct decision? Turn off the tape recorder. He didn't.

On July 16, 1973, Alexander Butterfield revealed the White House taping system on nation-wide TV. Correct decision? Destroy all tapes. He didn't.

As a result of these incorrect decisions, the real Nixon is revealed to us at last. A liar, a criminal — and a ditherer. Indelibly seared upon the transcripts are the contents of an executive mind which, so far from working "with logic, force and clarity," could not decide how to get out of a paper bag.

Haldeman tells him the British have devalued the pound.

"I don't care about it."

"You want a rundown?"

"No, I don't . . . It's too complicated for me to get into."

Haldeman tells him the treasury is worried about a run on the lira.

"Well, I don't give a (expletive deleted) about the lira . . . There ain't a vote in it . . ."

So shed no tears for the Big Enchilada. Say instead "Good riddance."

GOV'T CRITIC PAYS WITH HOUSE ARREST

By DON OBERDORFER

SEOUL — "It has been most difficult to control myself during this past year. I had to try hard to keep from bursting out, to keep serenity in my own mind. I think I know how Solzhenitsyn and some of the other Russian dissenters felt. I'm not surprised that some of them were placed in mental hospitals."

Kim Dae Jung was sitting in the living room of his closely watched house, chatting with visitors over steaming cups of Korea's famous ginseng (herb root) tea. A black secret-police sedan was parked up the street near the "real estate office" where lights burn all night despite the city's strict midnight curfew.

Three years ago Kim was the opposition party's unsuccessful candidate for president against incumbent Park Chung Hee. A little over a year ago he was shuttling between the U.S. and Japan as the most articulate outside critic of President Park's seizure of unlimited power under martial law.

Then on Aug. 8, 1973, Kim was abducted in broad daylight from a Tokyo hotel, spirited out of Japan in a fast boat and taken, bound and gagged, to the doorstep of his Seoul home. There he has remained ever since, first under house arrest and then under heavy surveillance, while international controversy has continued about his case.

One year after his kidnapping, Japanese newspapers and television are giving coverage to reviews of developments in Japan-Korea relations since the sensational incident. The Japanese foreign ministry has reiterated its unhappiness that Kim is not free to travel abroad and instead is being tried by a Korean court on old charges stemming from his unsuccessful presidential campaign.

The South Korean government has ignored repeated appeals from Prof. Edwin O. Reischauer, former U.S. ambassador to Japan, and others that Kim be released to accept a previously offered fellowship at Harvard University. A house foreign affairs subcommittee has asked for Kim's appearance in Washington as a witness in a study of human rights in Korea — but there's no sign the request will be granted.

Until a few days ago Kim was virtually a non-person in Seoul, with little news of him and none of his opinions permitted in the controlled Korean press. Then an Associated Press correspondent reported Kim's opinion that

Kim in garden

U.S. military assistance to South Korea should not be reduced or terminated, and stories about this viewpoint blossomed forth on the front pages here.

It has been his long-held and consistent view that cessation of American support would spell the doom of South Korea. "I think American military aid and the stationing of American troops here is still necessary in principle — but I think the U.S. should check any abuses . . . to make sure your military aid is used for defence, and not used against the Korean people," he said in an interview.

He added, as in the past, his protest against reduction of political freedoms in the southern half of the divided peninsula. "We are the same race as the North Korean people, with the same language, the same blood, the same cultural heritage. There is no reason to fight against North Korea except for freedom. If we lose our freedoms, we have no reason to resist," he maintained.

Whatever the condition of his countrymen, Kim himself has very little freedom in a practical everyday sense. His suburban house is surrounded by agents, who follow him conspicuously anytime he leaves his small walled compound.

His telephone is tapped. Any Korean who comes to see him is likely to be pulled in for police interrogation. For security reasons and to avoid difficulty to his friends, he leaves home only to attend Catholic Mass on Sunday and to attend sessions of the district criminal court where he is being tried on the old election charges.

Kim's kidnapping has been nearly universally attributed to the Park regime's uniquitous CIA, the secret police-intelligence-thought control agency. His suspected kidnappers are living better than their victim.

Former KCIA director Lee Hu-Rak, who was dropped from his high office last December in a bow to Japanese and Korean indignation about the case, slipped out of the country for a time but was persuaded to return. He is reported alternately living in a resort hotel in seaside Chung Mu and on the grounds of a Buddhist temple near Seoul.

Kim Dong-Woon, the embassy first secretary in Japan whose fingerprints were found at the hotel abduction site, fled home to Korea and disappeared from view. Exile sources say he is living comfortably on the grounds of the Walker Hill resort in Seoul.

Other members of the KCIA team that allegedly abducted Kim Dae Jung are said to have been scattered throughout the world — to Canada, Mexico, Chile, Los Angeles and other posts. So far nobody has come forward to tell the full story of last Aug. 8's kidnapping. Officially it is still an unsolved crime.

New Co-operation in the Caribbean

By JOHN CROCKER

Tourists long took precedence over local citizens

At the airport immigration desk a middle-aged American couple arriving in St. Lucia showed their driving licences issued in Detroit and were waved on. Just on front of this pair a young West Indian from the nearby island of Dominica has his passport scrutinised and was closely questioned. Had he got a return ticket? Where was he going to stay in St. Lucia , and for how long? What was the purpose of his visit.?

This sort of catechism to which West Indians are subjected when travelling from one island to another while foreign tourists move freely is one thing which has hindered progress in the organisation known as the Caribbean Community, or Caricom, which was brought into being last year to unite, economically, if not politically, the Caribbean members of the Commonwealth.

The travel problem was one of the main issues discussed at the Head of Government Caricom conference held here last month. This was attended by delegates from five fully-independent nations (Jamaica, Barbados, Trinidad and Tobago, Guyana, Grenada), five semi-independent associated states (St. Kitts-Nevis-Anguilla, Antigua, Dominica, St. Lucia, St. Vincent), two colonies (Montserrat and Belize), plus the Bahamas, which is, as it were, half in and half out of Caricom.

The general feeling at the end of the conference was that an astonishing amount of unanimity and political maturity had been shown by the West Indian leaders, who had been criticised not long ago by St. Lucia's Premier, John Crompton, for their selfishness and isolationism.

Symbolic, perhaps, of this new-found maturity was the agreement to end the anomaly which I had witnessed at the airport by making it possible for citizens of Caricom countries to have special documents enabling them to travel freely throughout the area; in some cases identity cards alone would be sufficient.

Probably, however, the most important agreement to emerge from the summit meeting here was that which set up machinery for harmonising prices of basic goods and commodities which, to quote Jamaica's Prime Minister, Michael Manley, "are either fundamental to the living standards of the people in certain territories or are fundamental to the economic process in various parts of the region."

The economies of the Caribbean countries — even those of the larger ones such as Jamaica and Guyana — have been seriously damaged by the energy crisis and world inflation. Unbalanced budgets and sky-rocketing living costs have hit the Caribbean worse, possibly, than most other parts of the world. The sole exception is Trinidad, which seems to be embarking on a boom period because it both produces and refines oil.

Any move, therefore, in the direction of stabilising, even partially, the prices of strategic commodities within the Caricom bloc is of vital importance. The summit delegates were particularly keen on getting Trinidad to sell its oil at a cut rate to Caricom members, but this is unlikely to happen at the moment because of the difficulties inherent in setting up a two-tier petroleum export price. Even without this special oil price, however; observers here see the conference as producing — potentially, at any rate, — a new Third World trading group which could be an example to other similar groups of nations.

This can only happen, though, if the resolutions passed at the conference are put into effect. St. Lucia's Premier Compton said just before the conference: "You will hear pretty speeches, but this will not be followed by any pretty action. All of us, we will rush home to our electorate whom we have to please, and to tell them the things they want to hear, and then leave the problems, sweep them under the carpet."

But perhaps Compton was too pessimistic. Heads of Governments have been urging integration outside the purely economic sphere. The Prime Minister of Barbados, Errol Barrow, strongly recommended that there should be a Caricom-wide amalgamation of judicial, police, medical and some other public services.

Guyana's Prime Minister Forbes Burnham has always been a strong advocate of forming a West Indian nation and he told the summit that, if this could not be achieved in political terms, then they should at least work to achieve dual citizenship "between ourselves here in the Caribbean."

He and others stressed the vital importance of the Commonwealth Carribbean speaking with one voice when negotiating with Britain and the European Economic Community, Latin America and other Third World countries.

People now seem to realise how impracticable it is these days for a small island with a population around the 100,000 mark to support the top-heavy paraphernalia of a Governor (plus staff), a Prime Minister or Premier, a Cabinet (plus its secretariat), Parliamentary Secretaries, a constantly expanding civil service, and so on.

"In the old colonial days" a retired St. Lucien doctor said to me, "one man would do the job that 10 do now; an that's what these islands will have to get back to sooner or later."

A Clockwork Orange Approach To Soviet Sexual Deviation

By DEV MURARKA

MOSCOW — A Clockwork Orange world of treatment of sexual deviation with chemicals and hypnosis in the Soviet Union is revealed in a new book on the subject, the first of its kind ever to appear in this country.

Quietly, because Russians are still very prudish about such matters, Female Sexopathology has become a rare possession for the few who have been able to get hold of one of the 100,000 copies printed. The author, Professor Abram Moiseyevich Svyadoshch, based it on his experiences at a Leningrad sexological laboratory, the only one of its kind in the country.

The book is a remarkable admission that sexual deviation exists in the Soviet Union and that it is a problem. Officially, the topic is frowned upon, but the publication of the book and the work of the Leningrad laboratory indicate that some degree of liberalization is taking place. It is possible that in future more of these "sexological" centres will be opened.

The book itself is a curious mixture of old-fashioned and new attitudes. For instance, there is reluctance to accept homosexuality as a normal state for some people, which is the modern Western approach to the subject. Homosexuality is a heavily punishable offence here.

For frigidity in women the book appears to recommend a diet rich in proteins and Vitamin E. It includes eggs, caviar, red pepper, cardamom, nutmeg, cinnamon and other similar spices. Hypnosis is strongly recommended and the author cites cases when frigidity has been removed after two or three sessions of hypnosis. But, he says, there is no effective medical treatment for frigidity.

For nymphomania depressants are recommended, but with the warning that only small doses should be used, otherwise they begin to affect working ability.

The most interesting aspect of the book is its detailed treatment of lesbianism and homosexuality. The Professor says that nearly 20 per cent of homosexuals attempt suicide. But he also says that 60 per cent of them do not want to be treated in any way because they consider their own condition to be normal.

The most highly recommended method in such cases is a combination of hypnosis combined with small doses of apomorphine, which produces nausea.

The patient is not told about the effect of the drug but when the effect is at its height he is shown pictures and films of male figures to accompany the acute nausea. This aversion treatment is given several times but the results appear to be doubtful. At best, it would seem, it produces only a temporary cure and the author is duly cautious about it.

The book is certainly a long way from accepting homosexuality in either sex as a natural phenomenon, to be accommodated and accepted socially. But many Russians are hopeful that Professor Svyadoshch's book will create an atmosphere in which an open discussion of this and other sexual topics at an intelligent level will become possible.

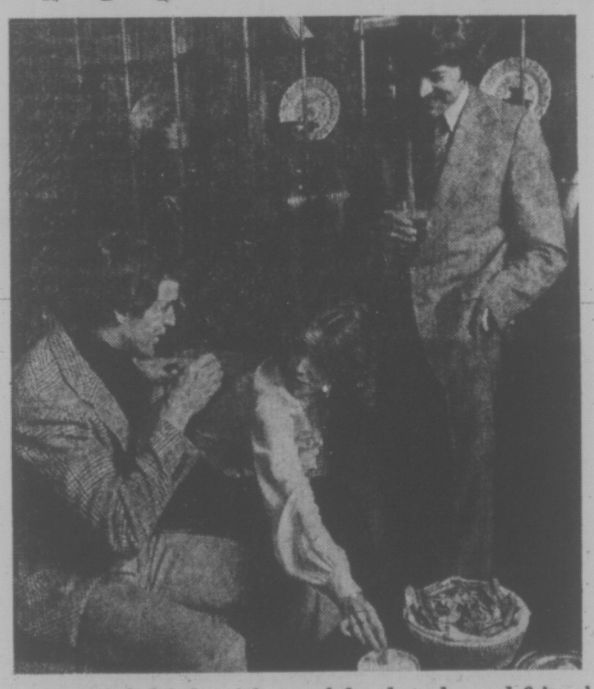
What's the best way to enjoy a drink? Slowly.



A social drink with good food and good friends. That's a traditional custom observed by most people in this country.

Like any other custom, of course, it can be abused.

Hastily downing glass after glass, for example. Or drinking with no food and no company. That's hardly the way to enjoy the products we make so carefully.

Most Canadians, fortunately, make responsible decisions in this respect—drinking and dining leisurely in a relaxed setting.

And with ordinary common sense, that's what liquor is—a pleasure, not a problem.

If you choose to drink, drink responsibly.

TODAY'S GRAIN

WINNIPEG (CP) — Futures prices continued their steep climb today in moderate trading on the Winnipeg Commodity Exchange.

Though flax, rye and oats retreated from their early-session highs, they closed with sizable gains, and rapeseed, corn and barley maintained their maximum advances throughout the day.

Gains were more modest in feed wheat and oats where trading was light.

Tuesday's trading volumes were 38,0000 bushels of feed wheat, 10,000 of oats, 879,000 of barley, nil corn, 255,000 of rye, 149,000 of flax and 52,000 of rapeseed.

CHICAGO (AP) — Grain futures closed generally higher Wednesday on the Board of Trade but tumbled from limit gains at the session's opening.

For the second consecutive day, however, corn posted a limit gain of 10 cents a bushel after the government predicted a substantially reduced crop because of Midwest drought conditions. Soybean oil also gained the 100-point limit as did oats at 6 cents bushel.

But soybeans and wheat suffered heavy profit-taking that undermined limit gains at the opening. Soybeans held firm at 30 cents a bushel higher throughout most of the session, but fell sharply to close 1½ to 15 cents a bushel higher. Wheat also opened sharply higher but dipped to close 3½ cents lower to 1 higher.

A government report had bolstered the market Tuesday as all contracts recorded limit advances. The report predicted sharp declines for the soybean and corn crops but a slight increase for the wheat crop. But profit-taking erased the report's impact in an active trading session.

At the close, soybeans were 1½ to 15 cents a bushel higher, Aug. 8.34½; Chicago wheat 3½ lower to 8 higher, Sept. 4.43; Gulf hard red wheat not traded; corn 10 higher, Sept. 3.64; and oats 6

Quiet Change at VSE

The Vancouver Stock Exchange has quietly changed its regulations on consolidations after investors complained they were being left with odd lots of shares when companies were reorganized.

The new limit is a consolidation maximum of one-for-five, leaving the investor with 200 shares from his original holding of 1,000. C. G. Caulton, Vancouver Stock Exchange vice-president for listings, said the change follows protests from investors about the frequency and extent of consolidations.

He said the British Columbia Securities Commission is enforcing a maximum consolidation limit of one-for-five. Consolidations on a one-for-six, one-for-seven and one-for-10 basis were common.

"There was no public announcement but companies are aware of the new regulation," Caulton said.

While the ratio of consolidations has been lowered, companies may still consolidate their shares as often as they feel is necessary, he said.

Most recent consolidations have been at the new limit of one-for-five.

He said a recent one-for-seven consolidation by Continental Cinch technically violated the new rule but was approved because the application was made when the old rule was in effect.

Continental Cinch became Gladiator Resources and investors were given 142.85 Gladiator shares for every 1,000 Continental shares.

The Gladiator reorganization was in effect a one-for-70 consolidation of Continental Consolidated, which earlier was reduced one-for-10 to form Continental Cinch. Continental Consolidated investors would receive a residue of 14.2 shares for every 1,000 purchased.

Investors protested consolidations of one-for-six and one-for-seven because they resulted in fractions of shares, which have no value.

In addition, high ratio consolidations tended to reduce board lot holdings to odd lots, which sell at a lower price. An odd lot is anything below 500 shares for a stock selling below $1.

A one-for-seven consolidation resulted in a distribution of 142.85 shares for every 1,000 bought. There would be no market for the .85 of a share and the 142 could sell from 2 cents to 10 cents below market value. The one-for-six consolidations resulted in 166.66 shares being distributed for every 1,000 bought.

One - for - three consolidations, still permitted under the new rules, also result in a useless share fraction. In the recent consolidation of Darsi Mines Ltd., there was a distribution of 333.33 shares of Dasher Development for every 1,000 Darsi shares bought.

The most recent consolidation reported was on Aug. 9 when Prince Stewart Mines Ltd. shares were reduced by the one-for-five limit to form Arodein Resources Ltd., distributing 200 shares of Arodien for every 1,000 Prince Stewart purchased.

July consolidations were:

Glen Copper Mines became Cusac Industries one a one-for-five change.

Chapparal Petroleums became Richadale Petroleums on a one-for-five consolidation.

Rayore Enterprises Ltd. became United Rayore Enterprises on a one-for-five basis.

Lower Valley Mines Ltd. was consolidated one-for-five to become Groton Minerals Ltd. Lower Valley had been previously known as Mt. Agnes Mines Ltd.

MONTREAL (CP) — Consolidated net earnings of Power Corp. of Canada Ltd. for the six months ended June 30 are $18,851,000 or $1.43 a share compared with $9,604,000 or 66 cents for the corresponding period in 1973.

Gross revenue from operations was $93,604,000 for the first half of 1974, compared with $87,135,000 for the comparable period last year.

Placer Development

VANCOUVER (CP) — Placer Development Ltd. net earnings dropped to $31.78 million for the first six months of 1974 from $32,601,000 for the same period last year, the company's annual report shows.

The report released Tuesday indicates 1974 net earnings on shares were $2.64 to June 30, a drop from $2.72 in the same period last year.

The report states that the net earnings for the first quarter of 1974 were $16,645,000 or $1.26 a share.

The report says that provisions for royalties and income and mining taxes for the first half of 1974 have increased to $11.04 million from $3,888,000 for the same period last year.

"British Columbia mineral royalties which are retroactive to Jan. 1, 1974, form the most significant part of these charges," says the report, signed by President T. H. McClelland.

Quebecor Inc.

MONTREAL (CP) — Quebecor Inc. reports net earnings for the nine months ended June 29 of $2,558,726 or $1.16 a common share compared with $1,817,405 or 84.2 cents a share in the same period last year.

Quebecor publishes two daily and seven regional weekly newspapers in Quebec, a French-language magazine and four U.S. magazines.

The company also owns a distribution firm, nine printing plants, a graphics manufacturing facility and a photo film processing operation.

Drilling Starts Off N.S.

HALIFAX (CP) — A Calgary-based oil consortium has begun drilling an exploratory offshore well about 35 miles northeast of Sydney, N.S.

The drilling was announced in a statement released Tuesday by James Nielson, president of Husky Oil Ltd. four other companies are involved in the drilling.

A spokesman for Husky Oil said in an interview in Calgary Tuesday prospects of finding oil in the area are "good."

"Companies of our size don't drill $3.5-million wells without having good prospects."

He said drilling at the site, about 20 miles offshore, began Saturday.

The group is attempting to tap a "very large" area beneath the ocean bed where oil could be trapped, the spokesman said.

Nielson said in his statement that the drilling follows seismic surveys conducted over the last two years by three companies.

He said the surveys indicate there is a large oil bed within a 100-square-mile area off the Cape Breton coast.

Companies in the consortium included Husky, Murphy Oil, and Louisiana Land Exploration Canada Ltd. — each with a 25 per cent interest in the project. The other two, Consolidated Natural Gas and Franc Anna Oil and Gas, each have a 12.5 per cent interest.

Oil Exports Down From 1973

OTTAWA (CP) — The National Energy Board will allow the daily export of 99,430 barrels of crude oil and condensate during September, down from exports of 1.1 million barrels a year ago, the board said Tuesday.

In a statement, the board estimated total production in September at 1.97 million barrels a day and domestic requirements at 973,570.

The board also said that 105,700 barrels a day had been set aside for shipment to eastern Canada through the Panama Canal and the St. Lawrence Seaway.

In August, approved exports totalled 894,226 barrels a day, production was 1.96 million and domestic requirements 1.06 million.

Quick Spaghetti By the Button

TOKYO (AP) — Kawasaki Steel Corp., said a subsidiary has introduced an automatic vending machine that can cook a dish of spaghetti with meat sauce in 27 seconds.

The company said that when the appropriate number of coins are dropped into the machine, a pack of spaghetti is brought from a refrigeration compartment to a cooking compartment where it is scalded in boiling water. Simultaneously, a pack of meat sauce is warmed up. The two are combined and spaghetti with meat sauce pops out of the machine.

Ticketing Change on Ferries

New ticketing procedure for Salt Spring Island ferries will give some people a free run while adding to the fare for others.

Starting Aug. 22 the ferry authority will start charging round-trip fares for passengers and vehicles boarding ferries at Crofton or Swartz Bay.

Anyone already on the island on that date will be able to return to Crofton or Swartz Bay without paying a fare. The total cost of getting to Salt Spring and back remains unchanged.

The practice already in effect on the B.C. Ferries Sunshine Coast system relieves shipboard mates from the extra duty of ticketing and could speed up turn-around time sufficiently to add an extra daily trip to the service, a ferries spokesman said.

But a few people will be stung.

For example, anyone taking a trailer to the island and intending to leave it there for future use will pay a return fare for both trailer and car or truck. He may not get a refund for the unused portion on his return.

The same applies to people carrying overlength loads in cars or trucks — such as lumber for a summer cottage — which costs them extra because they take up more deck space on the ship.

But the ferry authority could be loser on another variation of the side effect. At present a number of small logging companies use the ferry to haul semi-trailer loads of logs to mills on Vancouver Island.

If the practice continues, trucks will be charged round-trip fares on the basis of their shorter, no-load length because they will be paying on the return trip when their trailers are carried piggy-back.

Ferry spokesman Dave Price said it is inevitable some people will be annoyed with a "double extraction" fee.

But the authority discussed its proposal beforehand with the Salt Spring Chamber of Commerce and won approval. Price said "mates had a problem trying to ticket and keep on time at the same time."

Tickets and commuter books will be sold only at Crofton for Vesuvius-Crofton trips, and at Swartz Bay for Fulford-Swartz Bay traffic.

All existing commuter books will be honored until they are used up and new books replace them.

X-Ray Telescope Launched

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Scientists working in Western Canada launched an x-ray telescope with a giant balloon Tuesday to study the Crab Nebula, one of the most colorful stellar outbursts in the sky.

The launching of the 20-million-cubic-foot helium balloon went flawlessly. But Massachusetts Institute of Technology astrophysicists reporting here from Saskatchewan said they had trouble with the telemetry radio link sending information from the telescope to their ground station.

The telescope, launched from North Battleford, Sask., was drifting northwest toward Edmonton, where it was expected to make a parachute landing late Tuesday after being cut free from the balloon.

The scientists said they probably would not lose any scientific information because of the telemetry problem since the 1,700-poiund telescope also stores data for later retrieval.

The telemetry problem made it difficult to tell if the unmanned telescope was orientated properly on its target 5,000 light years away, but Prof. Walter H. G. Lewin, leader of the MIT group, said the instrument appeared to follow all their commands.

The telescope launch was timed to coincide with the infrequent phenomenon of the moon swinging in between the earth and the Crab Nebula, one of the most powerful sources of x-ray radiation in our galaxy.

Such lunar alignments with the Crab occur for 20 consecutive months, but only every 11 years. The current series of alignments began in April and can only be viewed from the northern hemisphere.

The moon acts like a giant shutter as it eclipses the nebula for abut 25 minutes, cutting off some of the Crab's x-ray radiation. The collective radiation is so intense that it normally obscures the examining individual objects within the Crab. The telescope, dangling at its float altitude of 133,000 feet during the alignment, then can scan interesting, individual objects in the nebula, such as the pulsar NP-0532 in its middle.

COLLAPSED STAR

"The pulsar in the centre of the Crab Nebula is undoubtedly the remnant of a star that collapsed catastrophically," Lewin said.

The star, so powerful that it radiates 100,000 times more energy than our sun, is probably as massive, but is only about 10 miles in diameter.

This collapsed star spewed out an ever-expanding cloud of debris that now measures four light years in diameter and appears in a telescope as brilliant swathes of blue, red and yellow.

For an unknown reason, Lewin said, the central star rotating 30 times a second blinks on and off in pulses, sending out bursts of radio waves, x-rays and optical light.

The Crab Nebula was first noticed by the Chinese on July 4, 1054, and has been a star attraction in the sky show for more than 900 years.

Ford Opens Overtures To Top Labor Boss

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — The U.S. government is moving toward a new nominal wage-price control program, and President Ford has served notice that he will be unhappy if big companies ram through inflationary price increases in the weeks ahead.

Ford also moved to reopen a lialogue between the White House and organized labor by holding a 45-minute private talk with AFL-CIO President George Meany.

These three economic developments Tuesday indicated that the economic policy of the fledgling Ford administration, described by some as a "do-nothing strategy," has a surprising activist streak.

Presidential press secretary Jerald Terhorst said the cost of living council that Ford wants Congress to resurrect will be "at minimum ... a monitoring ageney."

Thus, at the very least, Ford is apparently asking for a government watchdog with the power to command and analyze corporate financial records and to publicize price increases it considers unjustified and inflationary.

Ford made clear, however, that he does not favor giving the new CLC its former power to force price rollbacks.

At the same time, two powerful Congressmen said they would introduce their own legislation to revive the cost council. Chairman Wright Patman of the house banking and currency committee and chairman John Sparkman of the Senate banking committee said they would open hearings immediately on a bill recreating the council, which was phased out April 30 after 2 years as the government's chief anti-inflationary agency.

In a related development a day after Ford had urged Congress to make no "unwarranted cuts in national defence," a Senate subcommittee trimmed $5.1 billion from the 1975 Pentagon appropriation.

Despite arguments to another subcommittee from Defence Secretary James Schlesinger that the Pentagon could not afford any further deep cuts in its budget, the defence subcommittee of the Senate appropriations committee announced the action.

The appropriation now gives the Pentagon $81.9 billion for the fiscal year that began July 1, down 5.9 per cent from the $87 billion the administration asked, and $1.3 billion less than the House approved last week.

The subcommittee's cut is expected to be passed by the full panel.

In his first address to Congress Monday night, Ford said, "you and I have always stood together against unwarranted cuts in national defence. This is no time to change that nonpartisan policy."

Senate committee units also slashed $725 million from the foreign-aid budget request.

The foreign-aid measure, reported out by the full-foreign relations committee, contains $250 million aid for Egypt, $200 million economic aid to Israel and $300 million in ilitary grants and credits for Israel. It also restricts aid to Vietnam and Korea.

The committee, increasingly hostile to some forms of foreign aid for fear they will serve to bolster dictatorial regimes abroad or embroil the U.S. in continued involvement in Southeast Asia, wrote in sharp restrictions on parts of the program.

Total U.S. outlays for all forms of aid in this and other bills — military equipment, economic aid, postwar reconstruction aid — for South Vietnam were placed under a $1.28 billion ceiling, compared with a ceiling of $2.4 billion proposed by the Nixon administration early this year. The committee ceiling for Cambodia has $347 million, compared with a requested ceiling of $350.7 million, and for Laos, $100 million compared with a request of $143.5 million.

Quake Shakes Aleutian Isle

PALMER, ALASKA (UPI) — A sharp earthquake jarred the island of Adak in the Aleutian chain Monday night, rattling dishes and moving furniture.

The Palmer Observatory said the temblor measures 6.2 on the Richter scale and was recorded at 8:46 p.m.

A spokesman at the Adak navy base said dishes rattled, shelves toppled and furniture was moved. But there was no serious damage.

CITY COUNCIL AIM FACING REAL TEST

The "real aim" of Victoria city council will be put to the test Saturday when Mayor Peter Pollen and his squad of politicians meet the Canadian Pacific Lawn Bowling Association.

"After about two months of negotiations, His Worship and the august body known as city council have agreed to a game," said Walter Lewis, head of the association's games committee.

Slated for immediately east of Crystal Gardens at 2:30 p.m., the game will include a short rest at the half-way mark so the mayor and aldermen can re-assess strategy, Lewis said.

Competetent coaches will also be available for the council team during the 16-end regulation game.

Research Foundation Urges Legal Heroin

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Addiction Research Foundation has asked the federal government to approve a treatment program which would legally provide heroin to some Toronto addicts, a senior official of the federal health and welfare department said Tuesday.

Dr. Ian Henderson made the discolsure at a workshop in the foundation's advanced summer course and it was later confirmed by Al Everson, director of the foundation's Toronto methadone clinic, who was also at the workshop.

Dr. Henderson said there have been applications from British Columbia and Ontario wanting the federal government to approve experiments with heroin maintenance.

Although saying methadone should have a place in treatment of addicts, "and it's up to us (in Canada) to define it," Dr. Henderson said the major emphasis was to be on intensive programs providing addicts with new acquaintances, goals and skills.

Everson agreed that such intensive programs are essential, and said efforts are under way to interest private corporations in helping to establish a live-in community for heroin users in Toronto.

"I can't say anything about it — but we're speaking of something costing in the $500,000 mark," he said.

Everson said the Toronto methadone program is helping from 20 to 33 per cent of its subjects withdraw from the replacement drug, and that its aim is to "offer an alternative to what's on the street."

The government now allows some physicians to legally use methadone orally in treatment programs for addicts, but heroin maintenance or maintenance by injection of methadone are both illegal.

CHINA RENEWS WARNING ON FOREIGNERS

By JOHN BURNS
Special to The Times

PEKING — The publication of a renewed warning against the dangers of "foreign worshipping" and "wholesale Westernization" suggests that the nature and extent of China's relations with the West is still a matter of contention on the domestic scene, despite recent indications that the wider political struggle that has been waging for the past year is beginning to yield to pleas for unity and reconciliation.

The strain of touchy nationalism that surfaced briefly earlier in the year, occasioning widespread concern among Western diplomats, is forcefully revived in a lengthy article in the August issue of the Communist party's principal ideological journal, Red Flag. It is not clear, however, whether the article represents the opening of a new offensive by militants anxious to put a distance into China's relations with the West or simply an exercise in ideological posturing that is not intended to have any practical effect on present policies.

The ostensible purpose of the article is to demonstrate how reactionaries throughout modern Chinese history, from Mandarins at the Machu Court down to the Communists' own disgraced defence minister, Lin Piao, combined worship of the ancient sage Confucius with the advocacy of foreign influences. This, of course, ties the article neatly into the campaign to criticize Lin Piao and Confucious, the anti-rightist drive that has been in progress since last fall.

"The criminal intent of reactionaries at home and abroad has been to make all the people of China slaves to foreign powers," the article declares in one key passage.

In the case of Lin Piao, said to have died in 1971 while fleeing the country in the wake of an abortive coup, the chosen instrument of foreign domination is identified as the Soviet Union. In the article's re-telling of the official accounts of his demise, Lin is presented as having planned to install himself as "a vassal king under the nuclear umbrella" of the new czars of Soviet revisionism."

However, the thrust of the article appears to be more of a warning against the dangers of an excessive Western influence on China rather than of a sellout to the Soviet Union. Chairman Mao Tse-Tung's warning against "wholesale westernization," which antedates the post-cultural revolution approach to the West by many years, is quoted at some length and accompanying comments make it clear that the aspect of the current situation that is of particular concern is the heavy importation of Western technology.

"Facts show," the article says, "that a state that is not independent economically cannot be independent politically . . . in the future we will continue to persist in the principle of keeping the initiative in our own hands and working with our own efforts, firmly opposing the philosophy of servitude. As if that were not a sufficient manifest of nationalist sentiment a prideful conclusion invites all Chinese and foreign reactionaries to "tremble before the Chinese people."

Only time will tell what if anything this portends for China's relations with the West, but diplomats here are generally confident that the amiable attitude of the past few years will prevail for the foreseeable future. They base their confidence not so much on the assurances the Chinese have given to this effect, believing with the Chinese that it is not what a government says that matters so much as what it does, but on what might be called the Soviet imperative—the necessity for Peking of benign relations with the West so long as the enmity with Moscow continues.

3-Day Week Test By Esquimalt Police

By SUSAN RUTTAN
Times Staff

Some 22 Esquimalt policemen have started pounding their beats 12 hours a day.

The police department's shift workers have gone on a 12-hour day, three-day work week for a three-month trial period, and reports so far indicate they like the change.

"They seem quite happy with the new hours," Chief Arthur Burton said today.

The policemen work two 12-hour days, then get 24 hours off, then work two 12-hour nights and get three days off. They get two half-hour meal breaks on day shift, one half-hour meal break on nights.

The new hours were proposed by the men themselves, who had read about three-day weeks being used back east, Burton said.

He said the men don't seem to get too tired on a 12-hour day, because they're doing a variety of jobs during each shift. He said he is watching to make sure fatigue doesn't become a problem.

Other places have also been experimenting with shortened work weeks, including Greater Victoria school board which ends a three-month tryout of a four-day week on Friday.

The shortened work week was optional for school board office staff, who could work for eight-and-three-quarter-hour days, work half an hour longer every day and get a long weekend every third weekend, or work normal hours.

Personnel officer Dave Coton said many employees seem to have enjoyed the shortened work week. However, it won't be continued because it goes against the union contract.

Some women with families found the longer hours interfered with getting children off to school in the morning, or getting home to prepare supper at night.

A survey will be taken to see how many employees like the change. If there's strong positive response, the four-day week could come up in union negotiations this fall, Coton said.

Also on a shortened work week are servicemen at Brian Holley Motors on Douglas, who have been working three-day weeks since June. A spokesman said the servicemen seem to like working three 12-hour days and then having four days off.

City Eyes Housing Field; Looks for Sites, Funding

By KIT COLLINS
Times Staff

Victoria city council took its first step into the housing development business Tuesday in an attempt "to fill the vacuum left by private developers who haven't come through" with solutions to the housing crisis.

City manager Jim Bramley was asked by council's caucus to draw up a job description for a housing officer who will study available funding and sites in the city that could be assembled for housing accommodation.

"Personally, I don't feel there's anything sacrosanct about getting into housing development," Mayor Peter Pollen said, endorsing the recommendation by Geof Greenhalgh, the city's planner.

"Someone's got to fill the vacuum. We've depended on private developers who just haven't come through," the mayor said.

Greenhalgh told the caucus there "is nothing to stop us from initiating housing accommodation . . ." and there are sites in Vic West we could assemble, instead of waiting for the province to stumble over them.

"The capital funds are available from the province and federal government. We could do a lot."

Armed with a handful of multi-colored, multi-sized pamphlets available to the prospective householder from higher levels of government, Greenhalgh pointed out that the amount of research which has to be done necessitated the hiring of an extra body.

Locations the city could investigate, he said, include downtown fringe areas, and family accommodation in the west end of James Bay.

Initially, Pollen said, it would be "wise for council and the (Capital) Regional Board to discuss the recommendation" and he wondered "whether the regional government would be more suited for this type of work."

But Greenhalgh said the city was more directly concerned with planning and zoning and suggested it be undertaken by the city. Pollen agreed.

Ald. Sam Bawlf cautioned that the city would have to be "careful that we don't end up in competition with property-owners in the city. We have to have the interest of the neighborhoods equally at heart."

And Ald. Percy Frampton stated "we don't want to be in a management field at all. If we select sites we could decide the general concept we want and then turn it over."

The discussion was sparked after the caucus had considered the Wilderness Park co-operative housing proposal for Jackson and Summit.

The caucus decided to request the co-operative consider re-arranging plans to decrease the number of units from 38 to 29 and offer more family oriented accommodation.

HERITAGE HOMES 'VALHALLA' LASHED

The city will erect a "valhalla for old buildings, a happy hunting ground" if it starts buying heritage buildings for relocation on selected sites, Ald. Mike Young charged Tuesday.

"I'm not prepared to support a plan to buy houses. I can see justification for moving them under special circumstances but I can't see wasting money on transplanting them," Young said.

Young was referring to a recommendation from Maltwood Museum curator Martin Segger that the city form a heritage trust or foundation to buy and restore heritage buildings.

Such a foundation, said Segger, could purchase the two-acre Sea Cadet property on Robert Street along with four nearby heritage houses which could then be moved to that property.

The city's central area development and transportation committee decided to ask the province for matching grants to set up a rotating fund to buy heritage buildings to ensure their preservation and then resell them.

Young said he would like to see a vehicle for the purchase and resale of such houses on a revolving fund basis. In that case, he said, "we could sell them for what we paid for them or maybe more."

Houses suggested by Segger for preservation and relocation are at 223 Robert, 614, and 621 Seaforth and 527 Esquimalt Road. They represent the major styles characterizing Victoria's urban development during the '80s, '90s and early 1900s, he said.

Segger indicated an additional house, at 230 Robert, "in perfect condition," is also worth saving.

They'll Bounce Balls For College Credits

Camosun College students this year will be able to pick up a credit in scuba diving or tennis.

Credit courses in six "lifetime activities" — badminton, tennis, outdoor recreation, aquatics, scuba and adaptive physical fitness — are being offered for the first time.

They have been developed by Ed Fougner, who since last fall has been head of recreation and physical education at Camosun.

Each course will be about 26 hours long and is open to any student taking three other courses.

Fougner hopes to get about 20 students enrolled in each course, but said this week this may be difficult because of communications problems at the college.

Camosun is spread around the city in different campuses, so it's hard to let all students know about programs, he said.

Also, the college has no recreation facilities of its own so must rent gymnasiums, ice rinks and pools. And getting to these facilities is sometimes a problem for students without cars.

The scuba and aquatics courses will be held at the Crystal Pool.

As physical education director for Camosun, Fougner is stressing sports which students are likely to play throughout their life rather than competitive team sports.

"I had an idea that the kind of students that came to the college would probably be interested in unstructured activities, lifetime activities," he said.

Last year was "a bit of a dog's breakfast" of activities such as periodic canoe trips and ski trips, said Fougner.

"This year we've taken the same philosphy of lifetime pursuits and expanded it."

The Crystal Pool, rented once a week last year, will be available to students four or five times a week this year, he said.

The college has bought two sailboats, more canoes, and equipment to outfit 20 for hiking on the West Coast Trial.

Although competitive sports aren't stressed, students will be able to compete with other colleges in golf, badminton and curling, and compete locally in rugby.

C. Saanich Reels In Suspect

Central Saanich is a relatively crime-free haven, and it's not often police get a chance to tackle much in the way of theft.

But they have reeled in a suspect who they feel is responsible for at least some of the recent disappearances of tackle boxes from fishermen's boats moored at Brentwood Bay.

He's an 11-year-old boy.

Chief Bob Miles may wonder why the child was lured into a life of crime, but he doesn't discount the seriousness.

More than $1,000 worth of tackle and gear have been reported missing in the past month, including one box valued at more than $300.

So far police have recovered two boxes and are now casting about for their owners.

Court to Sit in U.S.

In what is believed to be a first in B.C. legal history, a provincial court will move out of Canada to seek witnesses and evidence in a trial of income tax charges against a North Saanich firm.

Provincial Court Judge D. K. McAdam, a court reporter, prosecutor and defence lawyer will go as a commission of evidence to four U.S. cities in September to gather evidence in the trial of Flying Firemen Ltd. and two of its officers.

Charges laid under the Income Tax Act against the company were read in provincial court April 3. Trial dates have not been set.

The commission will travel to Seattle, San Francisco, Los Angeles and Missoula, Mont., and is expected to hear five witnesses.

The first charge alleges that between April 1969 and June 1973 the company and officials Richard and Stella Mae Rude evaded taxes on $107,575 income earned by the firm.

Second is a three-count charge against Rude, that for 3½ years from 1969 on he evaded taxes by failing to file tax returns on $168,468 income, failed to declare income of $23,818 in 1972, and made a false statement concerning his income for 1972.

The final charge alleges that Mrs. Rude evaded taxes between 1969 and 1972 by failing to file returns when she had income of $40,470.

Old Warriors Look to New Home

By DEREK SIDENIUS

Old legions never die, they just fade away . . . and emerge as something new.

Take the Britannia Branch of the Royal Canadian Legion as a case in point.

For the past couple of years members of that august group of old warriors have tried to find an alternative to their present location at 1616 Blanshard.

Manager Bill Kane explains the impetus in one word: Taxes.

"We've had to be realistic. The building is in a very high tax area. Quite simply we can't afford to continue living here."

In June their prayers were answered when a small Victoria development company, Garden City Developments Ltd., made an offer they couldn't refuse.

Last Friday the 2,800 members of the Legion ratified the sale. Only 14 votes were cast against the executive's decision to sell.

The deal, reportedly fixing a price of about $375,000, has some novel features.

First, the Legion will hold the mortgage for the next two years, and, except for the auditorium which will be taken over by Garden City Sept. 1, continue to use the facilities until July 1, 1976.

Second, the Legion will have either first right of refusal to be tenants in any new building erected on the site, or have an option to buy back space under the Strata Titles Act.

Kane says Britannia Branch, whose ordinary membership makes it the biggest Legion in B.C., doesn't want to move to a new location . . . and never has.

The problem was finding another building in the same area which wouldn't cripple their finances.

"We've been operating at a deficit for the past five or six years," he says, "although we've been able to make up the difference by cutting into our savings."

The options open to the group, which has been at the present site since 1944, were to move, to amalgamate with another Legion, to stay, or to sell.

For a time they thought of amalgamating with the Pro Patricia and Naval Vets branches and moving into the old Gibson's Bowladrome building.

But it fell through when Pro Patria members voted against the plan.

President of Garden City Developments, T. B. (Borge) Larsen, says he hopes to erect a commercial building on the site, probably as a joint venture with one or more local firms.

An area of 5,000 square feet of the new building will be reserved for Britannia Branch.

That would mean a diminished size — it now has 12,000 square feet on three floors — but Kane is convinced members will be getting a better deal for their money

"It will set us up for life . . . a nice club, a clean operation, with modern fixtures and equipment."

During demolition the branch will suspend operations, Kane says.

Hockey Series On, Officials Say

By The Canadian Press

Three top-level officials expressed confidence Tuesday that the Canada-Soviet hockey series, scheduled to begin Sept. 17 in Quebec City and end Oct. 6 in Moscow, will go on as planned, despite threat of cancellation by the World Hockey Association Players' Association (WHAPA).

Ron Roberts, executive director of the WHAPA, told a news conference in Toronto Tuesday that unless the association is represented on the Team Canada 74 steering committee, the players will be withdrawn.

However, in Ottawa later, Lou Lefaive, president of Sport Canada, and the man chiefly responsible for arranging the Canada-Soviet hockey series, said he is sure the eight games will be played.

He said a meeting of the steering committee will be held in a couple of days and he is confident the differences can be settled.

"I'm sure this series is too important to the players and the owners not to work it out," he said.

He said he was informed by Roberts last Sunday that he wanted to be on the steering committee.

Speaking for himself and Douglas Fisher, the other Hockey Canada representative on the committee, Lefaive said: "We think he should be on."

But Ben Hatskin of Winnipeg, president of Winnipeg Jets and one of the two WHA representatives on the committee, rejected the idea.

In Winnipeg, Hatskin said he believed arrangements had been made to everyone's satisfaction at a meeting the day before the team members were announced.

He said the question of Roberts' participation on the steering committee never came up for discussion.

"We never invited him because we had made him legal counsellor for Team Canada."

Meanwhile, in Los Angeles, Dennis Murphy, WHA president, said he was "shocked" by the dispute.

He said it was the league's understanding that matters referred to by Roberts had been settled "to the satisfaction of all."

Besides being denied a voice on the Team Canada 74 steering committee, Roberts, a Dallas lawyer, complained about the money factor.

He pointed out that the National Hockey League Players' Association received $405,000 for participating in the 1972 Team Canada series against the Soviets.

He said the WHA players originally sought $100,000 or 50 per cent of the WHA's profits from the 1974 series, whichever was greater.

Later, Roberts agreed with Hatskin that the players' association should receive 50 per cent of the WHA owners' first $100,000 profits and 35 per cent of anything beyond.

"To preserve this series, we would agree to abide by that financial agreement," said Roberts.

The steering committee consists of Fisher, chairman of Hockey Canada; Lefaive; Jack Devine, president of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association (CAHA); Gord Juckes, CAHA managing director; Chris Lang, secretary of Hockey Canada; John Bassett Jr., owner of the WHA Toronto Toros, and Hatskin.

Extra-Inning Victory

MISSISSAUGA, Ont. — Esquimalt-Vic West got over the jitters and came from behind for an extra-inning victory in their first game of the Canadian little League baseball championships Tuesday at Erindale Springfield Park.

The B.C. representatives, down 2-0 after three innings, scored two runs in the seventh on a home run by Mike Bitten for a 4-2 win over Brockville, the Ontario champions who represented Canada in the Little Leaguye World Series at Williamsport, Pa., three years ago.

Bitten shared the spotlight with Esquimalt-Vic West pitcher Mike Bull, who hurled a four-hitter and held Brockville hitless over the last four innings. He struck out eight and walked only one.

Bases on balls led to Brockville's undoing as starter Geoff Moore and reliever Peter Clow walked five while combining for 11 strikeouts. The winners banged out seven hits.

Bull registered his seventh consecutrive victory since the playoffs began. The 11-year-old mainstay of the pitching staff chalked up three wins in area and district playdowns and three more in the B.C. championships at Lambrick Park in Saanich. Included in that total was a two-hit shutout in the provincial tournament final.

Brockville counted single runs in the first and third innings on two doubles and a pair of errors. But the B.C. side tightened up and tied the game in the fifth on a single by catcher Guyle Cornett, a Brockville error and three bases on balls that forced Moore from the mound and brought in Clow.

Clow held Esquimalt-Vic West in check until two were out in the seventh when Bitten smacked his third home run since the playoffs began last month.

Bitten is likely to be the starting pitcher in Esquimalt-Vic West's second start of the double-knockout tournament Thursday against Lethbridge Norcrest, the Prairie representative. Game time is 3:30 p.m. PDT.

Lethbridge remained in the winners' bracket Tuesday with a 7-1 triumph over Rosemount, Que. Barry Coghlin's two-run homer in the sixth was the big blow for the winners, who got a four-hit pitching performance and nine strikeouts from James Coghlin.

In today's game, Rosemount meets Erindale, the host team that dropped its tourney opener Monday to Brockville, 1-0.

Canada Blanked

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — Taiwan put together powerful hitting with strong pitching Tuesday night to defeat Canada 11-0 in the Little League-Big League world series.

Yin Chieh-Kao gave up one hit and struck out five in five innings in earning his second victory in the tournament.

Taiwan will meet San Antonio Friday night.

RUTH CROWN TO KIRKLAND

CAMAS, Wash. (AP) — Pitcher Mike Lentz threw a two-hitter Tuesday as Kirkland demolished Camas-Washougal 10-0 to win the Pacific Northwest regional Senior Babe Ruth baseball tournament.

Victory sends Kirkland to the national tournament, which opens Saturday in Mattoon, Ill.

Lentz struck out 10 and issued one walk, while teammate Bryan Johnson boosted Kirkland's cause at the plate with a double and a single, good for three runs batted in.

OTTAWA (CP) — Revenge is sometimes sweet and it couldn't have been sweeter for Ottawa Rough Riders Tuesday night when they defeated league-leading Montreal Alouettes 27-14 in an Eastern Football Conference game.

The defending Grey Cup champions were picked apart by Montreal quarterback Jimmy Jones and Als' superstar Johnny Rodgers during their last meeting and after leading most of that game, came up on the short end of a 20-17 score.

At that time it was the second loss in a row for the Riders and rookie coach George Brancato began laying the battle plans for the teams' next meeting. The plans worked and the Riders stifled Rodgers and Jones to upset previously undefeated Montreal and move into sole possession of second place in the EFC. The Riders have four points with a 2-2 won-lost record while Montreal has six points and a 3-1 record.

Ottawa end Rhome Nixon caught two touchdown passes from quarterback Jerry Keeling, the first a 61-yard pass-and-run play in the first quarter and the second a 47-yard effort in the second.

Gerry Organ picked up 15 points for the Riders on four field goals, two converts and a single on a wide field goal in the first quarter.

His field goals came from the 52, 50, 39 and 22-yard line.

Running back Steve Ferrughelli scored the only Montreal touchdown, his first of the year, on a one-yard run in the third quarter. Kicker Don Sweet converted the touchdown and booted field goals from the 52 and the 28-yard line.

He also scored a 39-yard single on a wide field goal in the fourth quarter.

The Riders controlled the game throughout, displaying the defensive and offensive ability that led them to the top in 1973, much to the pleasure of the 24,649 fans.

The Riders led 8-0 after the first quarter, 21-6 at the half and 24-13 after three quarters.

Rider defensive back Al Marcelin intercepted a pass by Rodgers on the first play of the game. Marcelin later intercepted two other Montreal passes, both by Jones.

Both teams lost one fumble, one by Jones and the other by Rider quarterback Rick Cassata.

Cassata lost the ball when he was injured in the second quarter. He left the game and didn't return. Officials said later that the quarterback may have received a mild concussion but Cassata said he is fine and is ready to play.

Brancato said the team used a wider defence to contain Jones and as a result stopped Rodgers, who picked up only 12 yards on passes.

Weather Danger To Lions' Streak

CALGARY (CP) — British Columbia Lions lay the only perfect winning record in the Canadian Football League on the line tonight when they meet the Calgary Stampeders.

B.C. and Montreal Alouettes were both 3-0 until Tuesday when Montreal lost to Ottawa Rough Riders 27-14 and left the Lions standing alone in the all-wins department.

A major factor in the game will be weather as Calgary has been deluged with about two inches of rain since Saturday but officials are hopeful things will dry up enough to get the field in shape.

Calgary can't look at their opponent's record without a touch of envy as the Stampeders are 0-3 with the last 14 season games bar one ending in defeat for the Cowboys.

"Statistics are for sports writers," says Gary Hobson, Calgary's general manager, when asked about the record.

Offensively, Calgary will be looking for the Peter Liske throwing arm to produce yardage while B.C. will expect Lou Harris to do as well as the 201 yards he rushed against Winnipeg last week.

Last time Calgary and B.C. met, the contest ended 23-20 for the Lions despite 245 passing yards on Liske's part.

Calgary is making defensive changes tonight, with Fred James injured and Gord Stewart replacing him as well as Lorne Sherbina doing some of the work for the ailing Brian Marcil.

Keys has picked up Mike Wilson for his B.C. defence and will likely use Dan Dever to replace Cal Winfrey who has strained kneee ligaments from his last stint as linebacker.

The CTV network will televise the game in Western Canada beginning at 7 p.m. PDT.

HEART TEST PASSED, SOCCER STAR SHIFTS

LONDON (AP) — Asa Hartford, a soccer star who suffered from a hole in the heart, was transferred from West Bromwich Albion to Manchester City for $600,000 Tuesday.

He passed a medical test before the clubs closed the deal.

Three years ago West Bromwich agreed to sell Hartford to Leeds, but when Leeds discovered Hartford's heart record the deal was called off.

A heart specialist told Hartford he could continue playing. He has continued with West Brom and also played six times for Scotland.

Hartford will play for Manchester City in its opening English League game of the season against West Ham next Saturday.

STRIKE CRUMBLING

By The Associated Press

"There is no longer a strike," said Buffalo Bills running back O. J. Simpson. "I hope they can get the negotiations over with in the next two weeks."

Simpson's opinion seemed prevalent Tuesday as National Football League players continued to pour into training camps across the country. The players' association strike officially entered its 46th day today, but it was fast becoming a skeleton strike.

The majority of players entering camps under the association's 14-day cooling-off period, which is supposed to start today, gave no signs of wanting to walk out again in two weeks, regardless of the outcome of talks with owners scheduled to resume Thursday.

"Maybe one or two individuals would leave," admitted Simpson, "but we won't leave en masse. I wouldn't leave."

If the players' strike appeared to be crumbling, the association got some support from an unusual quarter when 12 members of the House of Representatives threatened owners with a thorough inspection of pro football's anti-trust status if they don't deal fairly with the players.

Most veterans reported to camps without incident but there were exceptions in Fullerton, Calif., and Huntsville, Tex.

Twenty-two Los Angeles Rams veterans who showed up in Fullerton were greeted by general manager Don Klosterman who had two questions for everyone: "Did you come of your own volition or because you were ordered to by the association? Do you plan to stay here?"

In Huntsville, coach Sid Gillman, who among other things at first demanded that all returning veterans sign a pledge to stay in camp but later backed down, greeted 27 returning Oilers. After a 20-minute talk, he sent seven of them packing, including linebacker Paul Guidry who drove 26 hours straight from Buffalo to reach camp.

SOARING PEAKS which bound wide Skagit Valley are seen in distance from bridge crossing Skagit River near United States-Canada border southeast of Hope. Most of the valley, containing prime recreational assets, will be flooded to a point not too far downstream from this crossing if Seattle company carries out plans to raise Ross Dam. Roy Takes the High Road For a Late-Lap Triumph

By JIM CRERAR
Times Staff

The sprint cars made their return to Western Speedway Tuesday night and for 95 laps of the 100-lap feature, it looked like a carbon copy of last month's Strawberry Cup race in which Victoria's Roy Smith spent the evening looking at the rear end of Don McLeod's car from Tacoma.

But Smith turned the tables Tuesday by grabbing the lead on lap 96, going to the outside to pass McLeod on turn three and holding on for his first checkered flag of the season.

The victory increased Smith's lead in the points standings of the six-race International Drivers' Challenge series for modified racers. The fourth race is scheduled at Western Speedway tonight. Time trials are at 6:30 with racing at 8.

"I followed him too many times this year," Smith said after wheeling his 550-h.p. Vantreight Daffodil Special into the victory square. "I've finished second a lot of times. He's a hard runner."

But Smith ran with McLeod all the way Tuesday, remaining on his tail from lap 31. He made a couple of runs at McLeod on laps 74 and 76 and was wheel-to-wheel with him through lap 90.

Then came the third turn on lap 96. McLeod, hugging the inside, tucked in behind Gary Paterson of Carson City, Nev., and Smith went outside. By the time they hit the straightaway, Smith was in front to stay.

He wasn't going to leave me much room on the inside," Smith said. "He had more power coming off the turns, but I think I was handling just a little bit better coming into the turns. I felt that I had to go outside to catch him."

Start of the race, run before a crowd of 2,314 was delayed when Vern Church of Seattle blew oil all over the track during the parade lap.

That nearly gave Ray Pottinger of Nanaimo enough time to get into the race. Although he qualified, Pottinger had engine trouble and had to change a head. He nearly made it, but by the time the job was complete the cars had made three parade laps, all the rules allow. Rick Horton of Concord, Calif., got in as the first alternate.

A field of 18 started the race but only 13 finished. Horton was one of the spin-out victims and so was Fred Ede of Fresno, Calif., the leader for the first 21 laps.

Third place went to Jerry Sneva of Spokane with Patterson fourth, Bob Cochran of Edmonds, Wash., fifth and Ralph Monhay of Surrey sixth.

The victory was worth $800 to Smith.

The "B" main event, 25 laps, was won by Horton while McLeod took the "A" trophy dash and Bill Clarkson of Orangevale, Calif., won the "B" dash.

Point standings at the halfway mark in the series show Smith on top with 364 followed by Bill Deschamps of Lakeport, Calif., with 318, McLeod with 293, Patterson with 286 and Sneva with 263.

"B" trophy dash — 1. Bill Clarkson, Orangevale, Calif.; 2. Rick Horton, Concord, Calif.; 3. Buddy Boyd, Calgary; 4. Art Boulianne, Quesnel.

Lack of Hustle Puts Macs Behind in Junior Playoffs

Victoria McDonalds failed to muster up enough hustle Tuesday night and Richmond Roadrunners went home with a 16-11 victory and a 2-1 lead in the best-of-seven Pacific Junior "A" Lacrosse League semi-final series.

Approximately 1,000 fans turned out at Esquimalt Sports Centre watched Victoria take a 3-1 lead before the game was five minutes old. Bakers still enjoyed a 4-1 advantage at the 10-minute mark but Roadrunners later came up with four goals in less than three minutes to take a 5-4 lead going into the second period.

Richmond was never headed although McDonalds evened the count a 5-5 in the second period. Gord Neilson of voctoria was then charged with holding on a breakaway and Ed Ashcroft put his club ahead to stay by scoring on the penalty shot.

Lax checking and giving the ball away combined with some excellent goaltending by Richmond's John Lewis to produce the Victoria defeat.

Kevin Alexander and Norm Baker, one-two in league scoring during the regular season, failed to spark the Victoria defeat.

Kevin Alexander and Norm Baker, one-two in league scoring during the regular season, failed to spark the Victoria offence.

This chore was left to Rick LaPointe, a recruit from the junior "B" Esquimalt Teamsters, and Mike Walsh. LaPointe scored three goals and assisted on two others while Walsh also scored three times and led both clubs with a total of five assists.

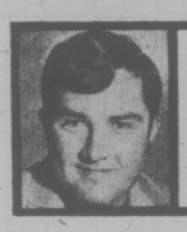
Lewis, who blocked 30 Victoria shots; added to the humiliation by scoring the last goal of the game after McDonalds had taken out goalie Alan Radley in favor of a sixth attacker.

Ron Pinder led Roadrunners with three goals while Brian Tasker, Ray Durante, Rico Bellusci and John Gamble each scored twice.

The fourth game of the series is scheduled for Friday in Richmond and the teams continue the battle Sunday at 7:30 p.m. in Esquimalt Sports Centre.

Meanwhile, Surrey Salmonbelljes knotted thier series 1-1 by tripping Burnaby Cablevision 14-12 in Surrey.

Government Stands Differ On Ross, Chemainus Dams



stewart lang

Prompted by a desire to actually see, first-hand, the values involved in the international controversy, our recent holiday trip to the Okanagan region included a 100-mile detour into the heart of the Skagit Valley.

A tiny sign marks the start of the Silver-Skagit Road about two miles west of Hope on the Trans-Canada Highway. From that point, drivers face nearly 50 miles of relatively good gravel road before reaching the northern end of Ross Lake.

And it is this lake, an impoundment of Ross Dam in Washington State, that forms the bone of contention between various factions.

Raising the dam would solve many of Seattle's electricity needs and our previous provincial administration made no objections to just such a proposal.

Unfortunately, this would flood approximately 5,300 acres up to the 1,725-foot elevation on the British Columbia side of the border, drowning most of a highly-valuable recreational reserve.

The first thing that struck me while driving into the area was the staggeringly-high mountains, snowcapped even in late summer, on both sides of the road.

Silver Lake, about five miles in, appears to be an ideal camping and fishing spot. We could see several vehicles parked in an open meadow on the far side of the lake.

Silverhope Creek, which meanders beside the road almost to the halfway point, is closed to angling but had the tempting look of a perfect fly-fishing stream.

Many dusty miles later, after dodging a number of logging trucks, we arrived at the surprisingly flat Skagit Valley.

★ ★ ★

If the dam is raised, this wide section of wintering range for animals would be lost. There are two varieties of deer in the area, a blacktailed variety found low in the valley and mule deer on the higher eastern slopes, along with beaver, bear, cougar, bobcats, racoons, otter, mink, weasels, marten and skunks.

Grouse are plentiful, ducks and geese stop over on their migration flights and no less than 44 species of birds were found to winter in the valley during a recent survey.

All this and a large number of aesthetic values would be lost if the land is cleared for the reservoir. And the resulting lake wouldn't create a different type of recreational resource as some supporters of the dam would have us believe.

At periods of drawdown, only mud and debris would be left behind for the recreation needs of our own expanding population in the Lower Mainland area.

The spectre of a road disappearing under water at the present level of Ross Lake sticks in my mind and I suggest people who oppose the raising of the dam just on principle should actually see the country.

It helps fuel the fire.

Meanwhile, closer to home, someone is at last starting to co-ordinate opposition to the proposed Chemainus Dam.

An action committee of four men has been formed: Art Morton, his brother Ralph (who was heavily involved in the Utah Mines controversy), Walter Latter (past president of the Cowichan Fish and Game Club), and Ed Mankelow (president of the B.C. Wildlife Federation).

Strangely enough, our present provincial government has taken a firm stand opposing a higher Ross Dam but regards the mainstem water-storage dam on the Chemainus River envisioned by North Cowichan municipality as a fait accompli.

But then, the government can be expected to support a cabinet committee decision to overturn a water rights branch veto on North Cowichan's bid for a water licence.

The action group is now concentrating on fact-finding and trying to fathom the reasons behind the government move, which was unprecedented and went against the combined technical advice of their own fish and wildlife branch and federal fisheries.

It seems ironic four men have banded together to co-ordinate opposition to a decision made by another quartet.

Action committee members told me repeatedly a public meeting should have been called to show why a dam on the Chemainus is the best alternative.

I have read a report which states drilled wells in the area could produce approximately 10,000,000 gallons per day, which would take care of domestic and industrial requirements of the municipality until 1990.

Why wasn't this explored further?

Another thought brought out at a recent get-together with the group involved the quality of life wanted by people in the area.

"If the people in the Cowichan Valley want to preserve this quality of life, they will have to restrict services," said Ralph.

Think about it.

Meanwhile, lend your support.

The action group can be reached at all of the following telephone numbers: 743-2008, 746-7687, 246-3109 and 748-1623.

Admittedly those numbers involve a long-distance call for Victorians.

But wouldn't the dam ultimately cost more?

'Nice Guys' Getting Tough

It was former baseball manager Leo Durocher who pointed out that nice guys finish last.

They don't always win the popularity polls, either, as they're discovering at Western Speedway this summer.

Track officials, it seems, have adopted an attitude of friendly persuasion insteading of unfurling the back flag when stock car drivers break the traffic rules at the Langford oval. The result is a growing crescendo of complaints from track management, drivers and pit crews.

Infractions, real or imagined, include intentional ramming after the checkered flag, teaming up to box in an opponent and cutting into the infield to pass on the backstretch.

Bitterness reached a peak during the B.C. super-stock championships 10 days ago.

"There were a number of infractions and little was done about them," Western speedway manager Reg Midgley said Tuesday. "There were a lot of complaints and bad feelings in the infield."

At least two drivers, Earl and Larry Pollard, have quit racing super-stocks in exasperation. Instead, they're building an unlimited model to race elsewhere next year.

As Midgley put it: "They (the officials) are trying to be nice guys and it's killing them."

But they're not dead yet.

In fact, they were very much alive last Saturday night, whipping out the black flag twice in one of the strongest shows of authority this season. Moreover, drivers can expect to see the penalty flag with increasing frequency.

"From now on, we're going to call them tight," warned Fred Best, president of the Vancouver Island Track Racing Association which appoints officials at Western. Best also serves as chief steward at the track.

"These guys are playing too rough," Best agreed. "There's bigger and better equipment and the purses are up. These guys know the score, but I've been involved in racing 10 years and I know the score, too."

Best has already laid down the new get-tough policy to his officials and there are more of them to crack down on traffic violations.

"The starter is like the referee-in-chief," Best explained. "But one man can't see everything that's going on out there, so we're giving him more sets of eyes."

Those extra eyes belong to additional spotters around the track, including one in the control tower and another in the communications booth.

So any driver planning to cut corners would do well to remember that from now on, big brother not only is watching, he's prepared to act.

Awards on Line As Rocks Close

It's awards night tonight at Memorial Arena where Victoria Shamrocks wind up their Western Lacrosse Association season by playing Coquitlam Adanacs but the main battle could be between Ron MacNeil of the Rocks and Dave Durante of the visitors.

Shamrocks are out of the playoffs but MacNeil leads the league in goals with 52. That's six more than Durante, who holds the points lead with 108.

The Coquitlam star has 10 more points than Paul Parnell of New Westminster Salmonbellies, who have one game left before the pplayoffs.

MacNeil holds down third place in the scoring derby with 93 points while Shamrock captain Ivan Thompson is fourth with 33 goals and 55 assists for 88 points.

Shamrock awards will be presented between periods of the contest, which starts at 8 p.m.

Reds Ready to Surrender But Pirates Kept Shelling

By The Associated Press

Cincinnati Reds' manager Sparky Anderson may put in for combat pay.

"When Al Oliver hit his homer to make it 12-2, I yelled out: 'Tell Danny Murtaugh (Pittsburgh manager) we surrender,'" Anderson said Tuesday night.

But the Pirates didn't stop the heavy artillery at that point. They continued shelling the Reds and went on to a 14-3 rout on 21 hits.

Richie Zisk, who drove in a run for the 10th straight game, and Oliver, who drove in five runs, were among Pittsburgh's big guns.

Elsewhere in the National League, Houston Astros stopped Chicago Cubs 3-1; Atlanta Braves edged Montreal Expos 4-3; Philadelphia Phillies nipped San Francisco Giants 6-5; New York Mets turned back Los Angeles Dodgers 3-0 and San Diego Padres beat St. Louis Cardinals 2-1.

Zisk and Ed Kirkpatrick each drove in two runs during a five-run Pittsburgh first inning and the Pirates kept punishing the Reds' pitching staff.

The Pirates opened the game with three straight singles off Jack Billingham, 14-8. After Willie Stargell struck out, Zisk doubled.

That boosted Zisk's RBI streak to within game of the National League record set by Mel Ott in 1929, and within two of tht major league record shared by Joe Cronin and Ted Williams.

Cesar Cedeno's leadoff triple sparked a two-run ninth inning that carried Houston over Chicago. Milt May followed Cedeno's triple with a single to break a 1-1 tie.

Oscar Zamora then relieved Bill Bonham, 10-15, and gave up singles to Bob Watson and Doug Rader and a sacrifice fly to Tommy Helms.

Dusty Baker belted his 14th home run of the season and an RBI single that highlighted a three-run fourth inning, leading Atlanta over Montreal. It was the fifth straight victory for the Braves. The loss ended the Expos' longest winning streak of the season at five games.

Atlanta's Ron Reed, 8-6, scattered eight hits with last-out relief help from Phil Niekro.

Jim Palmer is well and suddenly Baltimore Orioles' pennant chances in the tight American League East look a lot healthier.

Palmer, returning to the starting rotation after spending 54 days on the disabled list with arm trouble, tossed six strong innings Tuesday night in pitching the Orioles to an 8-2 victory over Chicago White Sox.

Elsewhere in the American League, Milwaukee Brewers tripped Texas Rangers 5-1, Kansas City Royals defeated Detroit Tigers 6-2, Boston Red Sox blanked California Angels 3-0 and Oakland A's beat New York Yankees 6-1.

Boog Powell made Palmer's job easier by belting a grand slam in the first inning. It was his eighth homer of the year and seventh career grand slam.

Palmer, a 28-year-old right-hander, now 4-8 on the season, underwent tests earlier in the day to see about the inflammation of a nerve in his arm, which has been plaguing him all year. The tests were negative, and Palmer's performance bore them out.

Decision Depends On Final Contest

LONDON (Reuter) — Pakistan, which received cruel treatment from the weather on the first four days, was rescued by it Tuesday when rain washed out the last day of the second cricket test against England at oLrds.

Just as the first test had been, the match was abandoned as a draw and the outcome of the series now rests on the third and final test, which starts at the Oval on August 22.

Although Tuesday's rain robbed England of almost certain victory — it needed just 60 runs to win with all its second innings wickets standing — it cancelled the misfortune which the Pakistanis suffered Monday when they were caught on a damp pitch after water seeped under the covers.

As a result of the leakage there was an official protest by Pakistan, which complained of an "appalling show of negligence and incompetence."

Scores: Pakistan 130 for nine declared and 226; England 270 and 27 for no wicket.

Park Gets Post

NEW YORK (AP) — Defenceman Brad Park has been named captain of New York Rangers, Emile Francis, coach and general manager, announced Monday.

First Loss For Munich Tourists

VANCOUVER — Munich Sportsclub men's field hockey team from Germany suffered its first defeat in four games on its Canadian tour here Tuesday, losing 2-1 to the B.C. Reps.

The Germans won games in Montreal, Toronto and Calgary last week while making their way to the coast for an eight-day visit.

Both the men's and women's teams from Munich play against Victoria Selects tonight at Lansdowne Junior High School. The distaff match is scheduled for 5:45 and the men's teams square off at 6:50.

CITY ATHLETES STAR IN MEET

EDMONTON — Two Victoria athletes came up with outstanding performances Tuesday during the opening day of the three-day Canadian Junior Olympics.

Bev Cox of the University of Victoria captured a gold medal by nipping Rachelle Campbell of Guelph in the women's 800-metre race. Both runners were timed in 2:10.1 minutes.

Tom Griffin of Mt. Douglas High School ran an excellent race in the men's 800-metre event, despite finishing third to winner Ed Takacs of Brantford and runner-up Peter Richardson of New Brunswick. Griffin's time of 1:52.9 broke the B.C. juvenile native record by nearly two seconds and equalled the open juvenile mark for the province.

Scott Neilson of New Westminster and Ken Wenman of Surrey collected the other gold medals for British Columbia.

Neilson hurled the hammer 185 feet, 7½ inches to beat runner-up Gregory Skidopoulos of Montreal by 35 feet, five inches. Don Tilley of Claremont placed fifth with a toss of 138 feet, three inches.

In the men's pole vault, Wenman cleared 16 feet, three inches to beat silver medalist Harold Heer of Vancouver by six inches.

Daughters Go After Cash Dad Missed

TORONTO (CP) — Twenty-seven years ago, a collegian from Notre Dame by the name of Jimmy Evert beat Emery Neale of Seattle in five sets for the Canadian Open tennis title.

"We were strictly amateur in those days," Evert recalled in an interview Tuesday. "I got my room and board and $25 expense money."

That was in Vancouver in 1947.

This week, his daughters Chris, 19, and Jeanne, 16, are prime contenders for the women's singles crown in the same Canadian Open which now has prize money totalling $130,000.

The two Fort Lauderdale, Fla., girls would divide $9,600 if they meet in Sunday's singles final.

Daughter Chris is the reigning Wimbledon queen, and on Sunday won the United States clay court title.

On Tuesday she won a 6-1, 6-2 victory over Maria Nasuelli of Italy.

Jeanne, the third seed who says she is "kinda honored" to be the sister of the tournament's top seed, had little trouble in defeating an inconsistent Patti Hogan, another American.

Ilie Nastase, the moody Romanian who won this tournament in 1972, became the first major victim of the strong international men's field when he came up flat and lost 6-1, 6-1 to Bill Brown of San Luis Obispo, Calif.

Top-seeded Jimmy Connors, the Wimbledon king who will marry Chris Evert in November, needed a tie-breaker to beat Ove Bengtson 7-6 in the first set but closed out the match 6-2 in the second.

A Surprising Record Splash

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadian swimming records continued to tumble Tuesday as three more were washed out during evening finals at the national championships here.

The highlight of the competition's second day came when Vancouver's Jim Fowlie sliced more than six seconds from the old record for the men's 400-metre individual medley.

In afternoon preliminary heats, the 18-year-old speedster chopped the record to 4:39.14 from 4:44.01.

In the evening final, Fowlie shaved his time again to 4:37.65 to become the world's third fastest in the medley event.

The first record toppled Tuesday evening was the women's 800-metre freestyle relay when a Pointe Claire, Que., team raced to the finish in 8:40.97, trimming an earlier best time of 9:04.02.

The other record-breaking win was taken by Vancouver's Canadian Dolphins Swim Club. That team whittled the record time for the men's 800-metre freestyle relay to 7:56.94 from 8:10.90.

These three results came as a surprise to some officials and organizers who were predicting an end to the record-breaking spree which began Monday at the first day of competition. Six other Canadian records were submerged that day.

Greg Stone of Victoria Olympians recorded the best individual performance among competitors from the B.C. capital with an eighth in preliminaries and an eighth in the final of the 100-metre breaststroke event with a personal best time of 1:10.4.

Victoria Olympians' team of Paul Jeune, Rob Grundison, Bill Mollard and Ken McDonald placed seventh in the 800-metre boys' freestyle relay while the club's female team of Carolyn and Cathy Rushcall, Judy Thompson and Margaret Meyers was 11th in the corresponding distaff event.

Vancouver's Judy Wright placed first in 100-metre freestyle.

Burrows Blasts Gorge

Walt Burrows smacked out a two-run homer Tuesday to give Greaves Movers a 2-1 victory over Gorge Hotel and a 2-1 lead in the best-of-five Victoria Senior Amateur Baseball League semi-final series at Lambrick Park.

The series continues tonight at 6:30 at Lambrick.

Gorge took the lead in the top of the sixth inning when Russ Holmes and Mike Squire drew bases on balls, Danny Rogers reached base on an error and Bob Bowles forced in a run by drawing another walk.

In the bottom half of the inning, Mark Perkins drew a walk and Burrows fouled two bunt attempts before connecting for the homer.

Tennis Officials Seeking Loohole

LONDON (AP) — Tennis officials said Tuesday that South Africa, cold-shouldered by many opponents because of its racial policies, is within sight of winning the Davis Cup by default.

Italy has refused to play its inter-zone final in South Africa as demanded by the draw.

The other inter-zone finalists are the Soviet Union and India. The Russians have said they will not play against South Africa anywhere and Indian officials said a match against South Africa would be "very difficult."

Basil Reay, secretary of the Davis Cup, said after a weekend of talks with Italian officials that no progress had been made.

The Italians said they would not go to South Africa. The South Africans refused to switch the match to Rome.

Tennis sources said the Davis Cup committee cannot find a loophole in the rules that would permit the match to be played in a neutral country.

The match has to be played by Sept. 22.

Asked what would happen if all three opponents refused to play South Africa, Reay said:

"That is the 64,000-dollar question, the biggest question of all. "All I can say at this stage is that to have a default in the final would be a great tragedy."

Wild Horse Slaughter Could Resume

RENO, Nev. (NYT) — The rounding-up and slaughter of wild horses for use as pet food may soon become legal again under changes proposed in a U.S. federal law enacted three years ago to save from extermination remnant herds of free-roaming horses and burros in the West.

Federal range land administrators, backed by cattle and sheep ranchers, have recommended that airborne and motorized roundups and "commercial disposal" of "excess" wild horses be allowed. Both practices are now banned. The recommendations were forwarded to Congress in June in a report signed by the secretaries of interior and agriculture.

Federal officials say that the wild horse population has "exploded" in the three years since the Wild Horse and Burro Act of 1971 prohibited their commercial capture and slaughter.

The officials contend that wild horses are so numerous in some areas that they are damaging rangelands by overgrazing and that they are eating forage that cattle and wild game herds depend upon.

Wild horse protection groups, however, assert that the population explosion is a myth promoted by the Bureau of Land Management officials who side with ranchers using public lands for cheap cattle and sheep grazing.

Velma B. Johnston, chairman of a group called WHOA, (for Wild Horse Organized Assistance, Inc.), charged in an interview here that officials of the Federal bureau were engaging in a "propaganda campaign" to force legal changes favoring ranchers and hunters who want horses eliminated because they have no value as food or as hunters' trophies. The horses compete with livestock and game animals for grass on the range.

Mrs. Johnston, who is known here as "Wild Horse Annie," says the proposed changes in the law "would open the door again to the same kind of bloody slaughter that went on in the 1940's and 50's." She concedes that she does not know how many wild horses remain. But she says that federal officials do not know, either, but they will not admit it.

Mrs. Johnston says a loophole in the proposed changes in the law would allow the horses to be sold for slaughter once again. Before it was outlawed by the 1971 law, ranches and hired hands made extra money catching the horses and selling them for a few cents a pound to slaughter houses for use as pet food, which was virtually their only commercial use.

The proposed changes are designed to allow federal officials to catch and dispose of "excess horses," that is, to thin out herds in areas where the horses are judged to be overgrazing or otherwise harming the environment.

The changes would allow these excess horses to be turned over to persons willing to care for them. If disposal became necessary, under the changes it would be done in a "humane manner," and not for commercial gain. But the changes make no provision to insure that the horses are treated humanely and not put to commercial use once they are turned over to private individuals.

Currently, the federal government is required to retain title of ownership and responsibility for any horses caught and donated to persons or groups wanting to keep and raise them.

There were some two million descendants of Spanish mustangs roaming the west at the turn of the century. In the 1940's and 50's, small airplanes were put to use killing them for sport, slaughtering them for pet food, or a combination of both to get them off the grazing grounds of cattle and game animals.

Airborne roundups were barred in 1959, but Mrs. Johnston of WHOA charges that the prohibition was routinely violated. By 1970, only 16,000 wild horses were estimated to be alive, according to the Bureau of Land Management.

As of last January, the Bureau of Land Management estimated the free-roaming horse population at 42,666 on Western public lands. These included once-tame horses turned out by ranchers who did not want to pay for their feed.

Under the 1971 protection law, ranchers were given until last Nov. 15 to file ownership claims on these horses. A total of 1,681 claims were filed for 17,189 horses and 123 burros. These claims are now being adjudicated and roundups of the claimed horses have begun.

Greenspan Named

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nomination of Alan Greenspan to head the President's Council of Economic Advisers, was approved Monday by the U.S. Senate banking committee. Greenspan, 48, who was nominated by former president Richard Nixon, has said he will stay on under President Ford. He will succeed Herbert Stein, who resigned to teach at the University of Virginia.

TR-6 CARS RECALLED FOR FUEL LINE CHECK

LEONIA, N.J. (AP) — British Leyland has announced the recall of approximately 40,000 Triumph TR-6 sports cars for possible leaks in the fuel system that would be a fire hazard.

A company spokesman said the recall includes the TR-6 models built from 1969 through 1974. He said the vehicles were built to conform to United States Emission regulations.

The company in Canada announced last week the recall of 4,800 units for inspection. A spokesman said the action was taken as a result of the planned U.S. recall and not because any problems had been reported by Canadian owners.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A 19-year-old said Tuesday his fear of the underworld forced him to commit a crime.

Calvin James Girbav, of 2629 Asquith, told police he stole the rear wheels from a vehicle Aug. 3 because he desperately needed money to pay a debt.

Defence counsel Rodney Smith told provincial court, Girbav committed the offence in a "fit of desperation" to pay the debt which was associated with heroin and the underworld. Names of the underworld persons were not given.

Judge William Ostler noted that "heroin vultures don't like to lose their customer."

Smith said it is in Victoria where Girbav gets in trouble, and suggested the court ban him from the city.

But Ostler said: "Generally speaking an order of banishment is not a good idea."

Ostler fined Girbav $350 and placed him on probation for one year.

Two men found by police fighting in the nude Monday in a downtown hotel room appeared in court charged with mischief and causing a disturbance by being drunk.

Harold Alvin Johnson, 56, of no fixed address, and William James, 21, of 516 Yates, pleaded guilty and were each fined a total of $75 and given six months probation.

They were also required to pay the hotel $75 for damage to the room.

Birkett said they were covered with blood.

Melvin James Kerr, 20, of 623 Baxter, was fined a total of $200 and placed on six months' probation for possessing a stolen credit card and attempting to utter a forged cheque.

The credit card and the account on which he tendered a cheque for $150 to a bank belonged to a man whose wallet containing cheques and the card had been stolen May 25.

Kerr pleaded guilty earlier.

A 19-year-old was fined $100 and placed on probation for six months for attempting to take a motor-vehicle without the owner's consent.

Leon Lloyd Lampman, of Sooke, had earlier pleaded guilty to the July 6 offence.

Lampman was found inside a car parked on Kaltasin Street in Sooke by the owner who heard the car being started.

The owner dragged Lampman into his house. But Lampman escaped while he called police.

David Telfer Powell, 24, of 1040 North Park, was fined $400 and had his licence suspended for impaired driving; Anton Jacobus Leuven, 26, of 972 Tolmie and Charles Clayton Young, 55, of 680 Garbally, were each fined $350 for impaired driving, and Rembrandt Garland, 25, of 4571 Lochside, was fined $300 for driving with more than .08 per cent alcohol.

Jay Axel Meyers, 19, of no fixed address, was fined $100 for possession of marijuana.

The Bank of Nova Scotia was given a Volkswagen van involved in a drug case.

Lawyer Peter Freeman, representing the Bank of Nova Scotia at Hillside and Douglas, asked Ostler last Wednesday to let the bank, which had a lien on the van, have the vehicle.

The 1974 van was seized by the Crown in connection with a charge of possessing marijuana for the purpose of trafficking against Robert Graham, 41, of 604 Wilson.

Graham faces a preliminary hearing into the charge later this month.

Crown counsel Bruce McConnan opposed the application then. He said if the request were granted the Crown would lose its right to forfeiture of the van.

11-14% Inflation Rate Looks Good to Britons

LONDON (CP) — To the average Briton, reports from North America about alarm over 11 or 14-per-cent inflation rates there sound strangely like a storm in a teacup.

It's not that Britons dismiss the gravity of such price increases. It's just that they sound so much less startling than their own.

The average Briton was just beginning to learn at the start of this month how to live with an inflation rate of 20 per cent a year. In practical terms, that meant that a pound of beef, for example, which cost 80 pence ($1.84) Jan. 1, 1974, would cost 96 pence ($2.21) Jan. 1, 1975.

But now a new batch of figures on wholesale price increases has been released, indicating the rate may turn out to be closer to 25 per cent or even higher before the end of the year.

The reasons are a combination of high world prices for imported goods, an excess of money in circulation domestically and a drop-off in production at home, creating an excess of demand over supply.

At the same time, industry is stagnant and unemployment is growing.

The economy has, says the authoritative publication, The Banker, ground to "the most shuddering stop there has ever been; confidence has collapsed."

The point now has been reached where shoppers find noticeable price increases in goods each time they do their weekly buying. A dozen eggs cost roughly 25 pence (57.5 cents) only a couple of years ago. Now they cost 45 pence and by the end of the year, experts predict the price may reach £1 ($2.30).

Local taxes are adding to the burdens, increasing in some areas by 50 per cent and more. Telephone rates are up by 40 per cent over a year ago and electricity charges by 30 per cent.

It has become commonplace to see tinned goods in stores with three or more price stickers overlapping, indicating as many price increases during the time the can has been on the shelf.

Meanwhile, workers are becoming more and more determined to win bigger and bigger wage awards to keep up with the price boom.

Wages, according to the statistics, have fallen slightly behind prices this year and unions are bending their efforts to gain pay boosts in the region of 30 or 40 per cent this year.

Weekly increases of 10 pounds ($23), unheard of a few years ago, are becoming commonplace for semi-skilled and skilled workers.

Radio and newspaper commentators now occasionally advise audiences how best to live with a continuing, worsening inflation, rather than devoting all their time to discussing ways of easing it.

An American economist, Harry Schultz, who has lived in London for years and published an economic newsletter with an amazingly-good record for prediction, has packed his bags and moved to Amsterdam.

In a BBC radio interview before he left, Schultz said he expects an economic crash in six months and advised listeners to buy gold coins rather than continue to hold currency which he feared is becoming worthless.

Acupuncture Needle Tried To Cure Heroin Cravings

BANGKOK (AP) — Two needles, a few volts of electric current and a textbook on the Chinese medical art of acupuncture are being used to try to ease the agony of drug addicts in Thailand.

Its practitioners here, all highly skilled physicians, are hoping to harness the ancient healing art into a standard withdrawal treatment for drug addiction.

Some doctors already give it high marks although the treatment is still in its experimental phase.

"The majority of addicts who have gone through acupuncture will not go back to drugs," said one of the doctors involved in the program. "But the ones treated with pills and drugs often do."

On the surface, the treatment is simple. A patient stretches out on a bed while the doctor inserts needles in both ears and runs a small electric current — about five volts — through the needles. Wires connect the needles to a dry-cell.

Each treatment lasts about 25 minutes and the patient is free to chat with the nurses, read a book or even light a cigarette.

What puzzles observers and even those who practise it here is what actually happens during those 25-minute sessions.

The patients normally report a growing calmness and relief from or complete halt to some of the basic symptoms of drug withdrawal — tears, bodily pains, a runny nose.

One patient, an opium and morphine addict for 30 years, was unable to walk across the small hospital room to get to the "operating" bed.

After five minutes under the needles he was smiling and reported feeling calm. After treatment, he left the room unaided.

To date, less than 50 addicts have been treated by acupuncture at the Phra Mongkutkhlao military hospital here. The hospital began the program about six months ago after one of its psychiatrists, Lt.-Col. Aroon Showanasai, received a book on acupuncture from a friend in Hong Kong.

Aroon set up the acupuncture treatment with two other colleagues on an experimental basis.

LASTS 10 DAYS

Treatment lasts 10 days, with addicts living at the hospital and receiving up to three acupuncture sessions a day. Follow-ups on patient progress are carried out and some return from time to time for additional treatment.

Addicts have ranged in age from 14 to 55 but most come from the student-age group. Last year, the ministry of health reported an estimated 200,000 Thai youths addicted to drugs, chiefly heroin.

The apparatus is inexpensive. A complete kit costs less than $100 and the actual application of the needles does not require elaborate training.

"Unlike methadone treatment, this kind of acupuncture can be performed by almost everyone and it doesn't require an elaborate setup," said an American doctor in Bangkok.

What actually happens during the acupuncture treatment — medically and in human terms — is a different matter. It is complex and is being studied by Aroon and his staff.

Dr. Merrill Shutt, an American doctor, says some of his colleagues view it as a "form of hypnotism," while others see it as a variation on Western medical efforts to affect human behavior through stimulation of brain areas.

Cash from Arabs

RIO DE JANEIRO (AP) — Arab countries are expected to invest $2 billion in Latin America by the end of this year with most of the investment in Brazil, the newspaper Journal do Brasil says. The Arabs are primarily interested in Brazilian technology in construction, steel production and the chemical industry, the newspaper says.

Pipeline Ruling Contested

OTTAWA (CP) — Application will be made before the Federal Court Thursday for an order preventing the National Energy Board from ruling on a pipeline application until it has considered natural gas supply in Alberta.

A notice of motion filed Tuesday by Union Gas Ltd. of Chatham, Ont., asks the court to quash a board ruling barring questions on the availability of natural gas to Trans-Canada PipeLines Ltd.

The application before the board is for permission to construct 58 miles of new pipeline on the Trans-Canada system to handle additional gas supplies for Greater Winnipeg Gas Co. and Gaz Metropolitain Inc. of Montreal.

But some of the intervenors, or interested parties, taking part in the hearing say the larger question to be dealt with is gas supply.

They fear that if additional facilities are built to move 45,500 cubit feet of gas gas a day to Montreal and Winnipeg, it may ultimately affect supplies to other existing customers of Trans-Canada.

In its application, Trans-Canada said the gas had been purchased from Pan-Alberta Gas Ltd. by Greater Winnipeg Gas and Gaz Metropolitain. Tans-Canada was acting only as a contract carrier.

Snarls to End In Six Weeks

The snarls of downtown driving should be relieved somewhat in six weeks, Ald. Sam Bawlf said Tuesday.

He made the prediction today during council's traffic control committee meeting.

Bawlf said the work could not be avoided although it did add to traffic tieups during the tourist season.

He was refering to Blanshard Hill at Burdett St. where the crown is being reduced.

Bawlf promised, however, that upcoming work scheduled for Government and Wharf would be done during the winter.

Brazil Rides Centre Line on 'Pill'

RIO DE JANEIRO (WP) — Brazil, the most populous nation in Latin America, plans to take a "we're-not-for-it-but-we're - not - really-against-it-either" stand on birth control and family planning at this month's UN world population conference in Romania.

The conservative, military-run government of this predominantly Roman Catholic country of 102 million people will tell the rest of the world it opposes state-directed family planning, but does not mind if the individual Brazilian families use contraceptives to voluntarily limit the number of children they have.

These recommendations were in a confidential, 35-page report handed in mid-July to President Ernesto Geisel. The report took more than a year to prepare, and officials from the several ministries, the president's office and the armed forces worked on it.

The report calculates that Brazil will have 200 million people by the year 2006. This means the government expects that more and more Brazilians will voluntarily control the size of their families during the next three decades and that the country's over-all population growth rate will go down.

Brazil's growth rate has been dropping slowly for the past 20 years. It is now 2.8 per cent a year — lower than some other Latin American republics, but three times greater than the United States.

If Brazil's population continued to expand at 3.8 per cent annually, there would be 225 million people here by the end of the century.

Rubens Vaz Da Costa, former president of the national housing bank and one of the few Brazilian officials to openly support family planning, has suggested that if the government actively encouraged couples to have just two children, the population by the year 2000 would be 180 to 190 million.

Costa believes government-directed family planning would help correct the lopsided income distribution in Brazil "since the largest families are the poorest ones."

Some 2.5 million Brazilian women now take birth control pills. But since the only way you can get these pills in Brazil is with a doctor's prescription, most users are from the middle and upper classes.

The Brazilian government allows several pharmaceutical firms to make birth control pills here, but it won't permit them to be advertised. Many druggists keep birth control pills locked up. And after filling an order, they often tear up the prescription, to prevent the customer from taking it to another drug store.

In contrast, you can walk into many pharmacies in Rio and buy sleeping pills, amphetamines and medicines containing mild tranquilizers without a prescription, even though all thse drugs are labelled: "for sale under doctor's prescription."

A few Brazilian congressmen are talking about introducing a bill to permit the sale of birth control pills without a prescription. Observers say there is little chance it will pass.

For poor people in Brazil, the most common form of preventing unwanted births is abortion. Abortion is illegal, yet Brazilian doctors estimate that 1.5 million clandestine take place in this country every year.

"Our country's poor people know nothing about how human reproduction works," said Dr. Walter Rodrigues, director of FEMFAM, Brazil's largest family planning agency. "We want to educate these people, so they can make a free choice about how many children they want to have — and when."

The government allows FEMFAM to operate freely throughout the country on one unwritten condition. FEMFAM may not publicize its activities. All its contacts with people seeking family planning advice must be made by word of mouth.

Brazil is the world's most populous Catholic country, and church leaders here follow Pope Paul's dictates against artificial birth control. But many doctors at FEMFAM clinics say privately that religious doctrine has little real influence on average Brazilians' attitudes toward birth control, at least in big cities.

An important reason behind Brazil's refusal to openly support family planning is this country's long-standing desire to populate its vast empty spaces, such as the Amazon jungle.

Yet census figures show that the population growth in the Amazon region is relatively low, while in the slums of big cities such as Sao Paulo, Recife, Belo Horizonte and Forteleza it is increasing twice as fast as the national average.

YOU'VE SUFFERED ENOUGH.

The price you've been paying for an economy car is in leg room, stability and performance. Suddenly, there's one notable exception.

If you ever fed a gas guzzling monster's fuel habit, you felt you owed yourself at least a look at economy cars.

But most economy cars made you cringe. And stoop. And hunch over 'til you got cramps. When you drove an economy car everything rattled, including your teeth. And it just wouldn't do what ever you wanted it to. Sure, there were well-made, sporty little cars. Sporting healthy price tags.

Poor you.

Economy meant suffering. And comfort was a luxury you didn't feel comfortable affording.

Which is exactly why Honda developed the Civic the way they did. Civic is incredibly stingy with gasoline. Of all 1974 cars tested for gas mileage by the US Environmental Protection Agency, the 4-speed Honda Civic came in first at 29.1 miles per gallon. That's 34.9 miles per Imperial gallon.

And while Civic is a tidy package outside, it's also roomy inside. That's the beauty of Civic's unusual trapezoidal shape. It allows a Civic to slip into a tight parking space, as a small car should.

It also apportions a surprising amount of roomy interior space for passengers, front and rear.

But Honda wanted to build an economy car you'd be thrilled to own. So they gave it performance features. Like rack and pinion steering. So responsive you can make a 90° turn without repositioning your hands on the steering wheel.

Like self-adjusting, power-assisted front disc brakes. Like MacPherson strut suspension, independent on all four wheels. This suspension is expensive, and rare, on an inexpensive car. Honda feels it's worth every penny for the firm, yet cushioning ride it gives.

Like front wheel drive. The engine weight over the drive wheels improves traction. And pulling is much more efficient than pushing for the engine. And front wheel drive carries power to the drive wheels without wasteful linkage. It also eliminates the hump running under the passengers' legs.

The cost of all these performance extras? Not a penny extra.

Now think about comfort in an economy car. Honda did. And Honda mounted the engine sideways to free up precious space on the inside.

Honda gave the Civic extra wide doors and seats that tilt at a touch, so that all the passengers can get in and out without doing pretzel imitations.

The air flow system circulates air constantly. And is combined with a super efficient heating and cooling system that keeps you toasty all winter and fresh all summer.

Honda Civic has door-to-door carpeting that snaps out for machine washing.

And more instrumentation than you'll find on many standard cars.

The cost of all these comfort extras? Not a penny extra.

Honda Civic is all this and more. Yet, Honda Civic sells for less than $3000.*

So if you're thinking of an economy car, we think you'll feel much better than you have before.

*Based on the suggested list price for two-door standard transmission Civic FOB Vancouver, Toronto and Montreal, price does not include handling, transportation or pre-delivery inspection charges, licence and provincial tax.

VIOLENT BLAST followed by raging fire demolishes a two-storey building in Collingwood, Ont., injuring four men from a road crew who were working in front of the building.

FIREMEN FEAR MORE SEVERE ACT

COQUITLAM (CP) — Firemen ordered by legislation to return to work in four lower mainland municipalities fear the emergency act is the opening move to take the right to strike from other workers, a spokesman said Tuesday.

John Gibson, president of the Coquitlam Firefighters Union, said they are worried that the Emergency Services Continuation Act passed in a five-hour emergency session of the legislature Friday may be partly replaced this fall by a more severe act taking the right to strike away from firemen, policemen, hospital employees and ambulance drivers.

He said that Labor Minister Bill King over-reacted to a strike of firemen in Coquitlam, Richmond, Delta, and North Vancouver district.

If firemen can be legislated back to work, it sets a precedent for doing the same to other groups, he added.

Gibson also criticized the amalgamation of the four suburban locals with the Vancouver local for future bargaining and imposing the Vancouver contract on the 289 suburban firemen.

Industry Not Gouging, Steel Price Probers Told

By BRIAN MCKENNA

SYDNEY, N.S. (CP) — World market conditions and not price gouging are behind spiralling steel prices in Canada, the federal inquiry into steel profits was told Tuesday.

In fact, increasing material and production costs were steadily reducing profit margins, said officials of Sydney Steel Corp. (Sysco) in the only submission made to the commission hearing here.

The commission of inquiry, authorized by a May 22 order-in-council, is conducting public hearings across Canada into the pricing and marketing policies of steel makers.

The inquiry will attempt to determine whether or not steel producers are charging exorbitant prices or gaining an advantageous market position by withholding inventories.

Sysco, a Crown corporation wholly-owned by the province of Nova Scotia, is the only major steel producer in the Atlantic provinces.

However, the commission was told Tuesday that the company has only a small place in the Canadian steel picture—less than six per cent of total output—and is largely at the mercy of world and domestic market conditions.

"The corporation is not a price-setter," said Allan Bird, company vice-president and secretary. "We compete in a very highly competitive market."

Sysco was taken over by the provincial government in 1967 after the previous owner, Dominion Steel, announced they were shutting down the mill for financial reasons.

In the years immediately following the takeover, the company hit record production of more than one million tons of finished and semi-finished steel annually.

"But very little repair and maintenance was carried out," said Sysco president Ernest Alderton. "We were trying to show that this could be a viable industry."

Now the plant is in need of major renovations and modernization and production has dropped to about 800,000 tons annually. Although Sysco has more orders than it can handle, it is unlikely to reach the "break-even point" of one million tons annually for several years, he said.

But the plant still has to compete with newer, more modern companies at prices "considerably lower" than those charged by steelmakers in the United States.

Asked what he thought would be a reasonable profit for Canadian steelmakers, Mr. Alderton replied:

"A return of 10 per cent on investment would make us the happiest people in the whole world."

He said Sysco currently loses about $2 million a month and is expected to show a deficit of $20 million in the fiscal year ending March 31, 1975.

In an interview, Mr. Alderton said Sysco along with other Canadian steel producers was not going after the lucrative export market because of its responsibility to Canadian industry.

"The steelmakers are a very responsible industry. We look after our domestic commitments first."

The commission resumes hearings in Regina Thursday and has scheduled a hearing for Friday in Vancouver.

Mideast UN Role Draws Praise

KURT WALDHEIM'S ROLE IS HAILED

Potentially explosive situation between the two oil-rich neighbors appears defused

Iran and Iraq agree in principle to pull their troops back from the border

By The Associated Press

The United Nations is winning praise from many quarters for its role in helping bring peace, temporarily at least, between those two oil-rich neighbors, Iran and Iraq.

For decades a border dispute has flared intermittently between the two states, resulting in bloodshed and prompting a massive military build-up that caused concern in the tense Middle East area.

But the area has been quiet since U.S. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim announced several weeks ago that Tehran and Baghdad had agreed in principle to withdraw troop concentrations along their border.

Special U.N. investigator Luis Weckmann-Munoz of Mexico had informed Waldheim that Iran and Iraq had agreed upon the troop pullback "in accordance with an arrangement to be agreed upon between the appropriate authorities of the two countries."

Stripped of diplomatic trappings, this meant that the two governments would turn now to the task of working out a comprehensive peace settlement, with the U.S. acting as mediator.

Waldheim had personally picked Weckmann-Munoz as his special representative for the ticklish assignement. He had known the diplomat as Mexican ambassador to Austria.

In his report to Waldheim, the special trouble shooter said both the Iranian and Iraqi governments had indicated that they would stand by the findings of a new joint delimitation commission, which could also settle at the same time the question of sharing of waters of those rivers that flow from one country to the other."

The accord brought praise from U.S. Ambassador William E. Schaufele Jr. who complimented the United Nations on "the skillful use of its role as a third party through whom nations may find a way to settle their differences."

Waldheim called in Weckmann-Munoz to deal with the issue after Iraq had complained to the U.S. Security Council on alleged Iranian border incursions.

The value of the U.S. mission is seen in helping clear up confusion over demarcation of the frontier as well as to point up the need to delimit those borders.

India on War Footing Against Inflation

The Manchester Guardian

NEW DELHI — "The rise in prices is the gravest of our problems," Prime Minister Mrs. Indra Gandhi said recently. Nobody in India disagreed. There was some relief that the prime minister, who had hitherto dismissed inflation as "a worldwide phenomenon", or as something attributable to a bad harvest or two, or as the economic cost of victory in the Bangladesh war, was at last really worried.

Hitherto her public intervention had been restricted to advising housewives to boycott overpriced goods and "ostracize" black marketeers and hoarders. She might as well have advised them to eat cake. Now she was proclaiming action "on a war footing." And she was being uncharacteristically blunt about what had been going wrong. The implications are wide.

Inflation is changing more of India than Mrs. Gandhi's speeches. Its immediate effect is to make traditional hardships unbearable. At 20 cents a pound, the price of rice in West Bengal exceeds the daily wage of the landless — who are one-third of that state's population.

Dy driving wheat and rice underground, inflation has all but dried up the public distribution system designed to protect the poor. There are food riots in Tamil Nadu, a rice surplus state, because rice has been smuggled into other states where the price is even higher. One-quarter of the villages in Orissa state have been declared "distress areas."

Legislators of the ruling Congress party in Calcutta report that in the leaner areas hundreds of men, women and children are going around villages looting food from affluent houses. Calcutta railway platforms have become homes for destitute refugees from villages and look as crowded as in the first days of the Bangladesh exodus.

There are persistent reports of starvation deaths and the public sale of children in Assam. All this is not because food is physically unavailable but because inflation, combined with the other evils of the Indian "system," has played havoc with its distribution.

Inflation has provoked uprisings that have brought down the state government and assembly in Gujarat. Students began it with a demonstration against the high cost of college food and found the whole state behind them. The same process is now going on in Bihar, where students' "food riots" have developed into a planned revolution against corruption which is visibly linked to high prices. Several other states are on the brink of joining Bihar.

Protest has provoked massive repression. Students in Bihar are heavily outnumbered by armed riot police brought in from outside the state, and throughout India prisons are reported to be as crowded as they were at the height of the Naxalite rebellion.

At the same time inflation has provoked new thinking, a new questioning of "the system" and a new exposure to its inner contradictions. Inflation, now running at 3 per cent a month, could prove to be the most revolutionary force ever to arise in India.

There are instructive parallels with Britain, from whence India takes so many of her public arrangements. Here, as in Britain, inflation awakens dormant class tensions. It lays bare the way economic decision making is hamstrung by outmoded social attitudes and vested interests. It leads to conflicts bitter enough to threaten the survival of liberal institutions. It can hasten reform or bring about massive reaction. Hopefully, it can eventually lead to a new awareness of common interests and a new consensus.

Indian inflation has reversed what marginal per capita progress had been achieved after more than 20 years of planning on liberal, socialist lines. Over the years economic growth and per capita consumption had kept marginally ahead of the population growth. This is no longer so.

Four years ago 40 per cent of India — 220 million people — was officially estimated as living below a subsistence standard of consumption calculated at about $1.20 a week. Today the proportion has officially been raised to two-thirds and the number to 385 million people.

SELASSIE GUARDS WANT $

ADDIS ABABA (WP) — Thousands of Ethiopian soldiers belonging to the imperial bodyguard marched peacefully Tuesday on Emperor Haile Selassie's palace to demand millions of dollars in unpaid salaries for service in the Congo more than a decade ago.

The soldiers, who were part of the United Nations peace keeping force during the civil war in The Congo (now called Zaire) in the early 1960s. Claim they were defrauded of a large portion of the $14 million paid by the world body to the Ethiopian government.

The sudden burst of discontent within the bodyguard poses an extremely serious problem for the aging emperor who has become increasingly isolated by the military reform movement seeking sweeping changed in feudal, Ethiopia.

The 8,000-man bodyguard is the only force still apparently loyal to the emperor. The secretive armed forces committee behind the reform movement has pretty well taken over other branches of the armed forces.

The disgruntled soldiers decided to take their grievance directly to the 82-year-old emperor after Prime Minister Michael Imru told them Tuesday The Congo money had already all been paid to them. A government committee was set up last week to investigate The Congo fund and was due to report back its findings Tuesday.

Dissatisfied with this response, 3,000 to 4,000 veterans of the Congo led by a large contingent of the bodyguard marched to the emperor's Jubilee Palace.

Although obviously angry, the soldiers were extremely well disciplined and carried no arms: There were no incidents during the march to the palace.

After a two-hour meeting with the emperor and prime minister, the soldiers said still another committee composed of veterans and led by Defence Minister Lt. Gen. Aman Michael Andom had been set up to restudy the question.

Ottawa Powerless To Help Him

TORONTO (CP) — A Burlington, Ont., man said Tuesday that the Canadian government was powerless to help him when a United States conglomerate put pressure on a Japanese drum manufacturer to gain control of the Canadian rights to import the drum from his company.

Harry Dunnette, owner of Northern Audio Musical Enterprises Co. Ltd. (NAME), said his company specializes in importing drums for rock groups from Pearl Musical Instrument Co. in Tokyo.

But, he said, Norlin Musical Instruments Corp. in Chicago, which imports the same drums for sale in the U.S., wanted the Pearl line for its Canadian subsidiary, Turner Musical Instruments in Toronto.

Lincoln Alexander, Progressive Conservative member of Parliament for Hamilton West, who said he intends to "follow this through," asked Alastair Gillespie, minister of industry, trade and commerce, to look into the affair.

The matter was referred to J. A. Doyle, chief of the furniture division of the textiles and consumer products branch, who was told by the Canadian embassy in Tokyo that Pearl's fear of losing its U.S. sales was the controlling factor in deciding who would serve the Canadian market.

Hiro Hayakawa, Pearl's export sales agent, said in a telephone interview from his office in Nagoya, Japan, Monday that he hopes "the Canadian government can protect Dunnette from American pressure."

Floods Spreading in India

DACCA (Reuter) — Flood waters which have caused 2,500 deaths in Bangladesh were retreating in most parts of the country today. But in northern India the swollen waters have engulfed new areas.

Much of Dacca was still under water and main roads were given over to small boats.

The Brahmaputra River was reported to be still a raging torrent, although an emergency ferry service was operating at one crossing point.

There were reports that the river was eating away the island of Majuli in India, one of the world's largest river islands where a famous Hindu monastery is located. The head monk is reported to have asked that priceless manuscripts and artifacts be removed to safety.

The government says 2,500 persons are known to have been killed by the floods or the cholera that followed.

West European relief organizations are gathering medical supplies at a collection point in Copenhagen.

In the Indian state of Bihar, the flooded Kosi, Burhi Gandak and Ganges rivers were reported to have breached their banks and swept over state highways.

Jaworski Cools Ruling on Nixon

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — Watergate Special Prosecutor Leon Jaworski is still undecided about whether or not to press criminal coverup charges against former president Nixon, and he will observe a "cooling off' period of at least several weeks before making a ruling on that questions, his aides said Tuesday.

Amidst an increasing amount of published speculation that a federal grand jury here is urging Jaworski to approve an indictment of Nixon and that the special prosecutor has already made a decision to that effect, aides pictured the situation as far from being resolved.

"He has had no contact with the grand jury, period — on any matter," said John Barker, a spokesman for Jaworski, in response to questions. He was speaking in the context of the time since Nixon's resignation announcement on Thursday.

Barker specifically denied as "just simply wrong" reports that members of the grand jury which on March 1 named Nixon as an unindicted co-conspirator, had contacted Jaworski to say they wanted to hand down a bill of indictment against the former president.

Barker also labelled as "wrong speculation" reports that Jaworski, having studied new evidence contained in subpoenaed tapes it recently received from U.S. District Court Judge John Sirica, had asked President Ford not to pardon Nixon.

"Most of these tapes haven't even been transcribed yet, Barker said.

Sirica has said he has finished listening to 27 of the tape-recorded presidential conversations, 10 of which he has forwarded to the special prosecutor. The 10 conversations include five tape recordings in which there was no dispute from the White House over executive privilege.

Tuesday, Sirica issued new orders turning over six more of Nixon's subpoenaed Watergate conversations to Jaworski, including two June 12, 1972, discussions between the former president and Haldeman.

It was these tapes, released by Nixon last week under pressure from his special counsel, James D. St. Clair, that led to an erosion of anti-impeachment sentiment in Congress and, ultimately, the resignation.

Also, trustees for about $2 million left over from Nixon's 1972 campaign say he cannot use the money for any legal fees he may incur.

Leftover funds are being used to pay legal expenses of Mitchell, Stans and others.

But the money cannot be used to pay legal fees for anyone who did not hold an official position in the campaign organization, trustees say. This includes Haldeman, Ehrlichman and Nixon himself.

And in Honolulu, top American Bar Association officials late Tuesday waived parliamentary rules, insuring a vote on a resolution putting the 185,000-member body on record as to whether Nixon should have legal immunity.

Ottawa Eyes Oxygen Unit Controls

OTTAWA (CP) — Closer control of portable oxygen units sold in sports and drug stores has been proposed by the federal health department.

In a letter to manufacturers and distributors of the units, Dr. A. B. Morrison, assistant deputy minister, says: "Many of these . . . units . . . on the market are not considered to be suitable for medical or emergency use."

The units, commonly used by heart patients, are intended to provide enough oxygen for an emergency until professional help can be sought. Units usually consist of a small bottle of pressurized oxygen, a pressure regulator and a face mask.

$12M MICROWAVE SYSTEM FOR HYDRO

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia Hydro and Power Authority has ordered a $12 million microwave system to span southern B.C.

Supplier is Collins Radio Co. of Canada Ltd., a subsidiary of the Rockwell International Corp., of the United States.

The 33-station microwave system will connect the hydro operations centre in the lower mainland with the Mica Dam generating site on the Columbia River. Project completion date is late 1976.

Guerrillas Flee Argentine Troops

Times News Services

BUENOS AIRES (UPI) — Argentine army units chased fleeing Marxist guerillas into the mountains near Tucuman province today in a drive to wipe out the highly organized underground band.

The fighting marked the first time the army was authorized to join police against guerillas since a civilian government came to power last year after seven years of military rule.

On the political front, President Maria Estela (Isabel) Peron presided Tuesday over the first cabinet shake-up of her six-week-old administration, replacing the ministers of defense, interior and education.

There was no indication of a connection between the antiguerilla campaign and the cabinet realignment. Rumors had circulated for weeks of cabinet changes following the death of Juan Peron July 1.

Federal police chief Alberto Villar and army commander Leandro Anaya were both in northwest Argentina today coordinating the massive anti-guerilla sweep, the largest offensive to date against the four-year-old underground movement.

Troops used search dogs, flares, and armored cars equipped with machine guns in combing the mountains.

Twenty-one guerilla fighters have been killed and 23 captured according to government reports, since a guerilla attack on an airborn regiment in Catamarca province failed before dawn on Sunday.

That attack, co-ordinated with a much more successful one on an army unit near Cordoba, 180 miles south of Catamarca, showed that Argentina's ultra-left urban guerilla organization, the people's revolutionary army, was shifting to large-scale operations in fairly open country. Military sources here estimated that about 60 or 70 men met in Catamarca for the failed attack.

A bus loaded guerilla fighters in army uniforms was intercepted by police and the ERP scattered. By Monday, they were facing the airborne troops outside city limits on the open terrain familiar to the army.

Under similar circumstances in June, an ERP band in the more lushly-wooded hills of Tucuman province successfully avoided elite police units supported by army helicopters and communications units. The guerilla organization boasted in its clandestine newspaper that it had proved itself able to sustain a rural guerilla operation as part of its campaign for civil war leading to a socialist revolution in Argentina.

3 Sites for Strike

Three city hospitals have been chosen as potential sites for possible strike action by the Hospital Employees Union, business manager Jack Gerow said Tuesday.

They are Royal, Jubilee, Victoria General and Gorge Road but Gerow, in an interview from Vancouver, said no strike votes have been conducted at any of the hospitals.

He is planning to meet local HEU members on Friday.

The dispute between the union and the B.C. Hospitals Association is over interpretation of three clauses in the new contract — cost-of-living-adjustments, premium pay for certain statutory holidays and severance allowances.

The union maintains its members are entitled to a 5.4 per cent cost-of-living increase effective July 1 while the association says the benefit is five per cent payable Sept. 1.

Gerow said it is "obvious that a consensus has not been arrived at and therefore no collective agreement is in force and therefore we have the right to strike action."

Making Burial Epitaphs Rapidly Dying Business

HAMILTON (CP) — Like the business it is part of, the epitaph is dying.

For centuries an epitaph was considered a necessary part of a burial, a few lines of thoughts that a person would carry with him to eternity.

The making of gravestones is still a profitable business but it offers nowhere near the same creative potential that making epitaphs used to in the old days.

Other than the cold facts of the person's name, age, dates of birth and death, gravestones today might carry a simple inscription like Rest In Peace or Just Sleeping. In the past, a stone could carry almost a person's life history.

For example, this epitaph appears on Jane Schoolcraft's gravestone at St. John's Anglican Church in Ancaster, Ont.:

"Carefully educated and of polished manners and conversation, she was easily fitted to adorn society, yet of retiring and modest deportment. Early imbued with principles of true piety, she patiently submitted to the illness which for several years marked her decline and was inspired through seasons of bodily and mental depression with the lively hope of a blessed immortality."

That was done in 1824, when a stone-cutter used a chisel and mallet to cut each letter by hand.

Now a rubber mold is made of the design and the mold is glued to the granite stone. It is then sand-blasted. The sand bounces off the rubber mold but etches out the letters and design.

A new dimension in epitaphs has been invented in the United States by a man who hopes to market talking tombstones that also show movies of the deceased.

Tombstones can be used to find out about ancient and not so ancient civilizations.

The Egyptians were the first to put a man to perpetual rest with his personal history. The ancient Greeks and Romans did the same.

Early Canadian settlers' tombstones offer clues to the hardships they suffered, as a gravestone from a Hamilton area cemetery indicates. The pioneering Rymal family is buried there, and from the grave of Frances Rymal we learn of a hard winter in 1865:

The winter of trouble is passed
The storm of afflictions is over
Her struggles are ended at last
And sorrows and death are no more.

In some cases epitaphs are humorous, like that of John Penny, who is buried in Wimborne, England. His epitaph reads:

Reader—
If cash thou art in want of any
Dig four feet deep and find a Penny.

Or that of Elizabeth Ireland, buried in 1779:

Here I lie by the chancel door
Here I lie because I'm poor
The farther in, the more you pay
Here lie I as warm as they.

Many epitaphs combine humor and history. An example from the American west is:

Here lies Lester Moore,
Four slugs from a 44,
No Les, no Moore.

William Shakespeare, writing his own epitaph, produced a plea:

Good friend for Jesus' sake forbear
To dig the dust enclosed here
Blessed be the man who spares these stones
And cursed be he who moves my bones.

W. C. Fields chose his gravestone to get off one last joke about his least favorite city:

"All in all, I'd rather be in Philadelphia."

They don't write epitaphs like that any more.

Turn Your Eye To the Potato

By HILDA BEASTALL

What does one need to do with potatoes other than boil the little ones to eat with parsely and butter, and bake the mature larger ones in fall and winter to devour with butter, sour cream or yogurt? There are other ways for other days, in fact potatoes are so good that we should serve them a different way each day for a month.

Collect a few ideas, using the imagination too, for potatoes are one of the satisfying basic foods when properly cooked. As to being fattening, just forget the extra butter and flour-thickened-gravy or sauce and enjoy the potato flavor adorned with a little salt.

Potatoes dug freshly from the garden plot have more typical potato flavor than stored potatoes, though fully matured potatoes have a rich flavor of their own. Potatoes with sprouts have poor flavor and should not be eaten in any quantity.

In summer, hundreds of pounds of potato salad are bought even in this area of moderate weather. Let your next potato salad be made at home.

This recipe is labelled Back East in memory of the hot summers when we cooked the food in early morning, to keep us going through the long stifling days and nights.

Back East Potato Salad

8 small to medium potatoes
1 clove fresh garlic
1 tsp. chopped chives
2 Tbsp. oil (I use soy oil)
1 Tbsp. fresh lemon juice
A little salt to taste
One-eighth tsp. paprika
Finley croppe dparsley, young celery leaves and dill leaves.

Opional additions: diced cheese, chopped hard-cooked eggs, finely slivered green or red sweet pepper; cucumber slices or young zucchini slices; sliced tomatoes, cooked green beans.

Brush potatoes well, leave whole (that's why we choose smaller sizes) and cook in boiling water with the whole peeled garlic. Twelve to 15 minutes is enough until fork tender in centers.

Drain, remove garlic, and cool only enough to handle on a fork to remove the thin skins. If potatoes are new with flaky skins, remove the loose flakes but don't worry about the little pieces remaining.

Dice the potatoes while still warm into small bite-sized pieces, piling them in a bowl. Sprinkle with chopped chives.

Beat the oil and lemon juice with a little salt and paprika in a cup — the two mix very nicely in case you are doubtful.

Pour the oil-lemon mixture carefully over the warm potato mixture, then as carefully, lift the ingredients with a wooden salad fork and spoon to coat all pieces of potato equally on all sides. This is a rough idea of "tossing" — it is not mixing or stirring — it keeps the pieces whole and separate, not mashed.

Potatoes are betttr when marinated in dressing while warm, than if diced cold and then coated with a heavily seasoned mayonnaise.

Cool at room temperature, then cover and refrigerate until near mealtime. Remove from frig a half hour before serving; sprinkle with the finely chopped green herbs — parsley, dill, or more chives.

There is a vast assortment of additions to choose from as accompaniments to Potato Salad. The potato is listed as having fair amounts of vitamins A and C (if cooked as indicated) and even some protein, so choose a variety of other things to increase your enjoyment of this homemade potato salad which serves three or four.

Vegetable Salad With Potatoes

2 to 3 cups diced cooked potatoes
½ cup cooked sweet corn kernels
½ cup cooked green peas
½ cup cooked sugarpod peas
½ cup cooked sugarpod peas
½ cup cooked diced carrot
½ cup cooked yellow or green beans, sliced
¼ cup oil and lemon juice dressing
½ cup finely chopped chives and parsley

Prepare potatoes and other vegetables carefully as explained for the Back East Potato Salad. Make oil-juice dressing as before, and toss the vegetables with this while they are still warm. Either the carrot or the corn can be kept out of the mixture, to make a border around the salad when serving. Cool the bowl of ingredients, then put into refrigerator until half hour before serving time.

Thest salads with potatoes and the rest have more flavor if not served too chilled, yet they must be kept from contamination while cooling, and from the bad effect of light.

At serving time, sprinkle freely with one-half cup of finely chopped chives and parsley.

Cool weather potato recipes will be offered later in the season. Garlic Potatoes and Potato-vegetable Chowder.

Fresh Apricots Need Coolness

Fully ripe apricots should be used as soon as possible, or be kept in the refrigerator or a cool dry place. If the fruit is a little on the green side, keep at room temperature to ripen. (Apricots used in jams and preserves should have a tinge of greenness).

The 1974 apricot crop is expected to be around 6.2 million pounds. The Okanagan region accounts for 99 per cent of the apricot production.

Fresh whole mushrooms can garnish Back East Potato Salad

Dutch Preserve Family Hour

The Borreluurtje is a very special daily happening for the Dutch. It can be roughly translated as cocktail hour but that does less than justice to an occasion which is more concerned with conversation and relaxation than with martinis.

You can hold a borreluurtje in your own home over a glass of sherry or even a coffee or soft drink. The ideal time is between 4 and 6 p.m. when the family gets together to discuss the events of the day.

In Holland it is often the local pub, with wisecracks, tall tales, and foaming glasses of beer. Nearly all large Dutch hotels have a borreluurtje and many art galleries find it the best time to hold their openings.

Snacks are often served with the borreluurtje and they are fairly standard throughout the country. They range from a simple dish of peanuts to blocks of cheese (often topped with ginger), liver and other sausage, pickles, salted cookies, and for special festive occasions, bitterballen.

Bitterballen are small, round croquettes served piping hot and with mustard. They are speared with cocktail sticks, and if they've just come in from the kitchen, it's advisable to wait a few moments before taking the first bite the inside can be very hot indeed.

Recipes for bitterballen can be found in the oldest Dutch cookbooks.

Here is one from Heerljke Gerechten (Delicious Recipes) by Wina Born, one of the top Dutch cookery writers.

BITTERBALLEN

½ lb. veal or beef
Mixed vegetables, peeled and diced
Thyme, bay leaf, peppercorns, salt, mace
½ tsp. curry powder
1 shallot (optional)
Very dry white breadcrumbs
1 large egg
1¼ oz. flour
1¼ oz. butter or margarine
Frying oil

Put a pint of water in saucepan, add small handful of vegetables, then seasoning and meat cut into small pieces. Simmer slowly two hours. Remove and shred meat. Put broth through a sieve.

Melt butter and mix flour into it. Cook briefly with curry, then add 1 cup of the broth. Mix and cook until thick. Add shredded meat, finely shredded shallot, and some ground pepper. Spread over flat plate and cool.

Divide into 24 portions and roll into balls. Roll balls in breadcrumbs, dip in egg, roll in breadcrumbs again. Fry until crisp and brown. Garnish with parsley, serve with mustard.

Canning Supplies Gone, Freezing Recommended

Home canners have been urged to put their fruits and vegetables in the deep freeze until extra supplies of canning materials hit the market in September.

Ann Milner, a consumer services officer for the B.C. department of consumer affairs, said Kerr Glass, one of the major U.S. manufacturers of the preserving jars, now has a supply of wide-mouthed jars and lids in production which will be on the market sometime in September.

She said the department had received a "great horde" of complaints about the shortage of the canning materials, mainly from the Interior and Vancouver Island.

Milner said a Kerr spokesman told her the company had been caught unaware by the upsurge in home canning and that a shortage of tin plate used for the lids also added to the shortage of canning materials.

YOUR TURN TO COOK: SOME VINEGAR TARTS

By DAPHNE TEMPLE

(Today's reader recipe is from Daphne Temple of 1243 Richardson Street in Victoria. Mrs. Temple, serving her fifth year as a member of the Greater Victoria School Board District 61, says this recipe was given her by her sister years ago and that it is invaluable for a busy person who still likes to entertain and feed the family well. If you have a favorite or family dish you would like to share, mail the recipe to the Family Desk, the Times, 2621 Douglas Street, Victoria, V8W 2N4.)

One of my favorite recipes for dessert or for when friends drop by is vinegar tarts. They're made like butter tarts and are simple but different.

They have a sweet taste, yet sharp, because of the vinegar. I don't know whether it's true or not but one of my friends tells me they taste just like the shoo-fly pie of the south.

TEMPLE

VINEGAR TARTS

2 egg yolks
1 cup of brown sugar
pinch of salt
3 tablespoons of vinegar
2 tablespoons of flour
pastry shells, made with your favorite recipe

Beat all the ingredients for the filling together and place in pastry shells.

Bake in a hot oven, 450 degrees for eight minutes. Reduce heat to 350 degrees and cook until pastry is a delicate brown.

Barbecued Spareribs Another Prizewinner

By MARY MOORE

Last month I gave you a prize-winning recipe for Cheese Apple Squares made by Maynard Gilbey, who entered E. D. Smith's recipe contest for their employees.

This month I have another prize-winner from same contest — Mrs. Gladys McClelland. Her entry was Barbecued Spareribs. We had a feast of them on Sunday last and I am anxious for our readers to own this recipe of Gladys'.

BARBECUED SPARERIBS
(Serves 4)

3½-4 lbs. spareribs (approximately 3 lean strips)

Sauce:
½ cup ketchup
2 tbsp. HP sauce
2 tbsp. sugar
2 tbsp. cider vinegar
¼ cup water
¼ tsp. Lea and Perrin Worcestershire sauce
½ clove garlic chopped
½ tsp. salt

Combine all barbecue sauce ingredients about 1 hour before needed.

Spread spareribs in shallow baking pan and roast for 1 hour at 350 deg. Fahr. Drain off all fat. (I transferred mine to a large plate. Incidentally, I used this surplus fat for frying some marble-size new potatoes.) Rearrange ribs in pan and brush liberally on top with prepared barbecue sauce. Return to oven for 15 minutes. Remove from oven, turn ribs over, brush other side with sauce liberally. Return to oven for 15 to 20 minutes until attractively browned. Cut ribs into serving pieces of 2 ribs each to serve. Leftover sauce may be passed at table, but it these are eaten in the fingers do not pass surplus sauce.

Great for a patio supper.

This spicy tomato mixture acts as an excellent marinade for steaks and roasts. Marinate for 24 hours, then grill, fry, barbecue or simmer in the marinade.

BARBECUE MARINADE

1½ cups salad oil
⅓ cup lemon juice
¼ cup Worcestershire
2¼ tsp. salt
1½ tsp. parsley flakes
½ cup wine vinegar
¾ cup soy sauce
2 tbsp. dry mustard
1 tbsp. black pepper
2 cloves garlic, minced

Combine all ingredients and mix well. Put beef in marinade and leave for a couple of hours at room temperature or overnight in the refrigerator. Turn beef occasionally. Marinade, when drained from the beef, may be used a second time. Store in a tightly covered jar in the refrigerator for one week.

Basic Stuffing Sees Use Often

Stuffed pork tenderloin — and the basic vegetable stuffing which is given at the beginning of this recipe can be used to prepare a great many recipes such as stuffed beef tenderloin, paupiettes of beef or veal, or stuffed chicken.

This stuffing can be made ahead of time. It will keep for two to three days, covered with buttered wax paper and refrigerated. Should you have any stuffing left over, try the following tidbit: Saute some large mushroom caps in a bit of oil. Season with salt and pepper. Spoon a bit of the leftover stuffing into each mushroom cap and sprinkle with breadcrumbs. Arrange the mushroom caps in an oiled baking dish. Bake in the over at 350 degrees for 15 minutes.

This recipe was created and tested by Pol Martin, Director of the Pol Martin Culinary School.

STUFFING
(Yield: 2 cups)

2 tablespoons butter or margarine
⅓ tablespoon oil
½ cup celery finely chopped
2 tablespoons fresh parsley finely chopped
1 tablespoon oil
1 pinch thyme
½ teaspoon sage
½ teaspoon tarragon
Salt
Freshly ground pepper
1 cup very coarse breadcrumbs
1 egg lightly beaten

In a heavy, medium size saucepan, melt 1 tablespoon butter plus 1 tablespoon oil over high heat until the butter begins to foam.

Reduce the heat to medium and add all but the last two ingredients and the remaining tablespoon of butter. Cook this mixture, uncovered, for 15 minutes, stirring occasionally.

Correct seasonings, if necessary.

Remove the saucepan from the heat.

Add the breadcrumbs, mix well and blend in the remaining tablespoon of butter and the beaten egg.

Stuffing for pork tenderloin can be made well ahead of time and refrigerated

STUFFED PORK TENDERLOIN
(4 people)

2 one-pound pork tenderloins, trimmed
½ cup stuffing
Salt and freshly ground pepper
1 tablespoon oil
1 tablespoon butter or margarine
1 tablespoon chopped carrots
1 tablespoon chopped onions
1 tablespoon chopped celery
Pinch thyme
¼ teaspoon oregano
2 tablespoons flour
2 cups hot chicken broth

Preheat the oven to 350 degrees

Slit the tenderloin lengthwise to a depth of three-quarters of the thickness. Season and place one half of the stuffing inside each tenderloin. Secure with white kitchen string.

In a small roasting pan, melt the butter and oil over high heat until the foam subsides. Immediately add the stuffed tenderloins, reduce the heat to medium and brown the tenderloins, on both sides, uncovered. Transfer the tenderloins to a heated platter. Add the chopped vegetables and the spices to the roasting pan and cook, uncovered, for 2 to 3 minutes.

Add the flour and cook the "roux" for 4 to 5 minutes, stirring constantly.

Remove the roasting pan from the heat. Add one cup of chicken stock to the "roux" and mix in thoroughly with a wooden spoon. Return the pan to the top of the stove, over low heat. Pour in the remaining stock, while stirring constantly. Bring the sauce to a boil. Return the pork tenderloins to the roasting pan. Season with salt and pepper.

Cover the pan and place in the oven for 45 minutes.

Fruit choices make cheesecake something special

Fresh Fruit Parade Filing Past Kitchen

Just as in a parade, fresh Canadian fruits march onto the market, one following the other. Strawberries are on their way past now, but sweet cherries, then raspberries, blackberries and apricots follow close behind. Blueberries and peaches come next and, of course, locally grown berries and currants take their place in line.

Unfortunately, each fruit makes only a brief appearance on the market, so try to take advantage of them when they are plentiful.

Since all these fresh fruits are perishable, use them promptly to avoid loss of food value and flavor. Berries may be kept in the refrigerator up to two days. They should be stored unwashed and uncovered in a shallow container. Cherries should be covered and used within three days. Fruit should be washed shortly before using to retain its fresh appearance and quality.

Food Advisory Services, Agriculture Canada, feature a "Summer Fruit Special." The delicate flavor and texture of this cheesecake-type dessert are made 'special' simply by topping it with any fresh fruit. Serve it with one or a choice of summer's bounty.

SUMMER FRUIT SPECIAL

1½ cups vanilla wafer crumbs
1 teaspoon finely grated lemon rind
6 tablespoons melted butter
½ package unflavored gelatin
2 teaspoons lemon juice
12 ounces cream cheese, softened
1-3 cup fruit sugar
½ pint whipping cream
2 cups sweetened prepared fresh fruit

Combine vanilla wafers and lemon rind. Stir in melted butter. Press into 9-inch spring-form pan. Bake 4 to 5 minutes at 450 degrees F. Soak gelatin in lemon juice 5 minutes. Heat until gelatin is dissolved. Beat cream cheese, sugar and gelatin mixture together until fluffy. Gradually add whipping cream and whip until stiff peaks form. Spread over baked crust. Chill until set (about 2 hours). Serve with fruit. 6 servings.

Cooks Aboard Small Craft Take Incentive From Deep

By CRAIG CLAIBORNE

Over the years when we have explored the potentials of cooking aboard small craft, we've found our interest lagging. Most of the people we've talked to say they would rather swab decks than cook, and almost all the recipe books instruct the cook to open a can of cream soup, beef stew or corned beef hash.

We met William (Sy) Goode on the beach this summer when he was climbing over rocks at Gardiner's Bay foraging for periwinkles. When we asked what that was all about, he said he was going to cook them with a few seasonings and take them for a snack when he went sailing later that day. He invited us for a ride and we accepted with alacrity.

During the course of the day we discovered that Goode is a professor of sociology at Columbia University, that he is a former president of the American Sociological Association, and that he is an enthusiastic sailor, cook and spinner of food lore.

"Periwinkles," he told us, "were introduced into this country from England in the mid-1800's. Don't ask me why. I do know they grow different sizes in different locations. I spent many summers on Martha's Vineyard and they're much larger there than they are here."

A short while later, in Goode's tow, we found ourselves peering over the side of a dock where he, sporting fins and snorkeling gear, had dived for local oysters.

Given the time, Goode could willingly have been pressed into a search for crabs off Louse Point. Instead, it was back to the kitchen for further preparation for the lunch aboard his 20-foot craft.

The gentleman, who is 56 years old, divorced and the father of four, proceeded to prepare the periwinkles; to make a spectacularly good cold zucchini soup to be blended with yogurt; mussels alla Romana with a touch of garlic and white wine; and a seviche made with local scallops and freshly caught striped cod fillets.

After an hour or so in the kitchen, the foods were packed in baskets and taken aboard the small boat lying at anchor a few yards away.

Zuccini Soup With Yogurt

4 large zucchini, about three pounds
8 tablespoons butter
4 cups coarsely chopped onion
3 cups chicken broth
1 clove garlic, finely minced
Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste
2 cups yogurt
½ cup chopped green onions.

1. Trim off the ends of the zucchini. Do not peel the vegetable, but cut it into one-inch cubes. Set aside.

2. Melt the butter in a deep kettle and add the four cups of coarsely chopped onion. Cook, stirring, until the onion is wilted and golden. Add the zucchini and cook, stirring, about one minute longer.

3. Add the chicken broth, garlic, salt and pepper and cover. Simmer about five minutes. The zucchini must remain crisp. If any of the pieces of zucchini seem too large, chop them inside the kettle.

4. Chill and stir in the yogurt. Serve sprinkled with chopped green onion.

YIELD: Eight or more servings.

Mussels Alla Romana

36 mussels, well scrubbed
2 tablespoons more olive oil
½ cup dry white wine
1 clove garlic, finely minced
¼ cup finely chopped parsley
Hot red pepper flakes.

1. Wash the mussels well under cold running water and set aside.

2. Select a skillet large enough to hold the mussels in one layer. Add enough oil to barely cover the bottom of the skillet. Add the mussels and cover.

3. Cook, shaking the skillet, until the mussels open, three minutes or longer. Remove from the heat.

4. Pour the pan juices into a saucepan. Add the wine, garlic and parsley and bring to the boil. Reduce by about half.

5. Meanwhile, remove and discard the top shell from each mussel. Place the mussels on the half shell in a bowl and pour the wine mixture over them. Sprinkle with red pepper flakes and chill.

YIELD: Six servings of six mussels each.

Periwinkles A La Goode

1 pint freshly harvested periwinkles
¼ cup olive oil
Water to barely cover
Juice of one lemon
12 coriander seeds crushed
10 peppercorns
1 whole clove
1 bay leaf
3 tarragon sprigs or 1 teaspoon dried
Salt to taste.

1. Wash the periwinkles well in cold water and drain. Set aside.

2. Pour the oil into a saucepan and add enough water to barely cover the periwinkles when they are added. Add the remaining ingredients, except periwinkles, and bring to the boil. Simmer about 10 minutes and let cool.

3. Add the periwinkles and bring to the boil. Simmer three to four minutes and remove from the heat. Let stand to room temperature. Drain.

4. Let the guests serve themselves and offer small tooth-picks or pins to extract the periwinkles.

YIELD: Six or more servings.

Serviche With Scallops And Cod

1 pound bay scallops
½ pound boneless, skinless cod, cut into three-quarters-inch cubes
1 clove garlic, finely chopped
2 bay leaves, crumbled
1 teaspoon crushed red pepper flakes
¾ cup lime juice
1 squeezed lime, cut into fine dice
1-3 cup chopped green onions

1. Combine all the ingredients in a bowl and refrigerate 12 hours or longer.

Serve as an Appetizer, with slices of French or Italian bread.

YIELD: Six to eight servings.

WHEN CREW would rather swab decks than cook — or perhaps eat — it's time to drop the tin opener and tackle shellfish and whitefish combination's offered by Sy Goode. Here, scallops are rinsed in fresh water prior to shucking.

Take Care With Greens

Crisp and cool salad greens prepared and stored properly are the most important ingredient in successful salad making. All salad greens should be refrigerated in tightly closed plastic bags or containers, they may be grouped according to the care they require and their optimum storage time.

Iceberg and Boston lettuce, romaine, watercress and mint should be trimmed, washed, thoroughly drained immediately and may be refrigerated up to a week. Parsley prepared in the same way will keep three to four weeks in a plastic bag or glass jar with paper towels in the bottom to absorb moisture.

Elysees Closed

PARIS (AP) — The lower sector of Champs Elysees, the wide avenue that the French say is the world's most beautiful will be turned into a pedestrian walkway Thursday, a national holiday. The city council decided to close the avenue between the Place de la Concorde and Place Georges Clemenceau, near the Grand Palais, between 2 and 7 p.m. Thursday—Assumption Day.

Flu Hits Uruguay

MONTEVIDEO (AFP) — An influenza epidemic has cut school attendance by half in parts of the Uruguayan interior and forced some schools to close for lack of teachers. In the capital, where absenteeism reached between 15 and 25 per cent, health officials Tuesday confirmed unofficially the existence of the epidemic but added that no deaths had been reported.

Eateries Moot Merits of Freezing

By DAVID ANDELMAN

NEW YORK (NYT) — "The only food frozen at '21' is the ice cream and the ice cubes," said Jerry Berns, vice president and host of the plush Manhattan restaurant.

That kind of declaration has taken on new interest in New York and elsewhere lately in light of a San Francisco controversy over a proposed ordinance that would have ordered restaurants to note in their menus whether a dish had been prepared from fresh or frozen ingredients.

The ordinance was ultimately refeated, but it left behind a renewed debate around the country in which some argue that food to be good must be fresh, others argue in favor of freezing only certain foods, and some come out in unadulterated praise of freezing. Through it all there are those who wonder: Whatever the merits of freezing, shouldn't the consumer know when the method is employed?

Meantime, there is no argument over the fact that frozen food is widely used in restaurants — there are even completely packaged entrees with fancy names: remember that Chicken a la Kiev you had in an intimate restaurant that boasted 30 opulent dishes but seemed to have the smallest of kitchens?

Supplying restaurants are scores of frozen food companies. Huge ones such as Armour, Swift and Flagstaff put together 200 to 300 dishes each; some small firms sell perhaps only one main product. (Restaurants are of course, just a single aspect of the multibillion-dollar-a-year frozen food industry, which also supplies schools, executive dining rooms, airlines and grocery stores.)

"There are many restaurants using frozen food, but no one is going to admit it," said Pierre Franey, vice president and executive chef for Howard Johnson's and a former head chef at Le Pavillon. Nor are suppliers willing to name their customers.

One reason for the secrecy, according to industry sources, is a fear of the TV-dinner stigma — restaurants are afraid that the customer will conjure up an image of his $7.50 dinner emerging full-blown from a disposable aluminum package.

Wife Thinks Bug Bomb Puts Bomb Under Hubby

DEAR ABBY: I'd like to know if there is anything in insecticide that could excite a man.

Arthur is 55 — just the age when most men start to slow down, but he's still going strong. He gets especially roused right after he sprays our property for bugs.

I noticed it last year when we moved into this house. We had ants and roaches, and right after Arthur sprayed he started looking for me. He would get so passionate that he didn't care if I did my housework or even cook. Last year was bad enough, but this year it's worse. On weekends he sprays sometimes two and three times a day. It's really getting me down.

We live in Florida. What brand of bug bomb will kill the bugs down here without bringing out my husband's manhood so strong?

He uses Raid, TNT and Rid-a-bug, and they all have the same effect on him. The brands that don't affect him don't have any effect on the bugs either. Please help me. — Tired.

DEAR TIRED: My chemical experts know of nothing in any brand of insecticide that will rejuvenate the waning desire of man. If there were, we'd have a lot more dead bugs, livelier husbands and tired wives.

DEAR ABBY: These are the facts: Married 35 years to a charming, talented, beautiful and loving wife. She is generous and kind to animals, but she has one fault which drives me up a wall.

She has an uncontrollable urge to do the driving from the passenger side of the front seat. Her blue eyes are focused sharply on the road even before we pull away from the curb. "Watch that man coming toward us! He's trying to pass us! Don't change lanes now! There's a stop sign ahead!"

Abby, I have had 50 years of accident-free driving experience and I am a careful driver.

I have been wanting to take a drive up to Tahoe, down to Carmel, or to some of the other lovely places in this area, but I don't think I could tolerate a co-pilot.

I've thought of adhesive tape and blinders, but I just couldn't. I love her too much. Any suggestions? — San Franciscan.

DEAR SAN: Driving from the passenger seat is done impulsively and reflexively. You can't change her, and she can't help it. Take a train, plane or a bus, but don't drive.

CONFIDENTIAL TO K.O.: If you're serious about organizing a girls' boxing team in high school this fall, you'd better plan on providing them with some sort of artificial padding to protect their natural padding. Girls need to be protected in certain anatomical areas the same as men, albeit different areas.

Edible-Art Recipes In Children's Book

By LISA HAMMEL

NEW YORK (NYT) — When Vicki Cobb tells someone that their art work looks good enough to eat, she means it.

Mrs. Cobb, a science teacher, children's writer, creator of educational materials and sometime artist, has written an amusing book that takes a most unusual approach to introducing art techniques to children. It is called, Arts and Crafts You Can Eat (J. B. Lippincott: $4.95 hardcover, $1.95, paperback).

Each chapter discusses some aspect of art, such as drawing, painting, printmaking, stenciling, mosaics, sculpture and assemblage, and then explains, with quite a straight face, how these techniques can be applied to decorating food.

Flipping through the pages one discovers, for example, that with amazingly little effort you can inlay pancakes, paint pictures on bread, stencil mashed potatoes, make mobiles out of lasagna, and memorialize your best friend with a three-dimensional chocolate head.

"Children love to mess around with food," Mrs. Cobb noted recently.

"Besides," she added, "so many crafts books today are geared to making beautiful products. But that can be very inhibiting to people. If the things in this book don't turn out well, at least you can eat them."

The book, in which all the art productions are edible, is geared primarily to 10 to 14 year olds. But there's no reason why adults should be cheated of the fun.

The work is liberally illustrated with line drawings by Peter Lippman, who may or may not know much about art, but knows what he likes: he ate everything in the book.

It's Packing Day At Old Ford Place

ALEXANDRIA, Va. (AP) — This is packing day for the Fords of Crown View Drive. The new tenants of 1600 Pennsylvania Ave. hope to move in Monday.

"It's very beautiful and in excellent condition," observed Betty Ford after inspecting the 132-room White House, Tuesday.

Although Mrs. Ford said she is looking forward to moving across the Potomac River, she made it clear that "I really don't consider it my house —I consider it the house of the people."

Her husband, President Ford, plans to be out of town moving day, addressing the national convention of the Veterans of Foreign Wars in Chicago.

Broached about her views that Ford is thinking about appointing a woman for vice-president, Mrs. Ford replied that it is a fine idea.

"I think it's time that women step up and take their place," she said. Nevertheless, she said her husband has not discussed with her who will be his choice for No. 2.

Mrs. Ford, appearing at her first full-fledged news conference at the White Houses, hedged on whether she called herself a women's-liberation advocate.

". . . Certainly on equal rights and equal pay," she said finally.

Replying to another question at the outdoor interview, Mrs. Ford says she favors abolishing the church ban that prohibits women from becoming priests in the Episcopal (Anglican) church. The Fords are parishioners of the Episcopal Immanuel Church on the Hill in Alexandria. The parish has a woman deacon, Rev. Patricia Park, who has been fighting against the ban on woman priests.

Mrs. Ford said she doesn't plan to redecorate the White House, but "there are some very minor changes" that might be made.

NEW RECORD SET ON LENGTHY HIKE

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Gordon Brooks, a high school teacher from Columbus, Ohio, set an unofficial speed record for crossing the United States on foot Tuesday and lost 25 pounds doing so.

Brooks set out from the steps of New York City Hall June 21, and followed a 3,000 mile route through Pennsylvania, Missouri, The Texas Panhandle, New Mexico, Arizona, and the California Desert. Brooks, who is 5-foot-six, weighed 130 pounds at the start of the run, and 105 at the finish.

His time was 53 days, 7 hours and 45 minutes.

According to the Guiness Book or World Records the previous mark of 53 days, 12 hours and 15 minutes was set in 1972 by John Lees of England.

Brooks drank pomegranate juice and ate natural foods until near the end of this jog.

"Then he began craving candy bars, spaghetti dinners, seven-up," said a friend.

His Backyard Tree Strictly for Birds

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. — For the second year in a row, C E. Winter's backyard sycamore tree is for the birds. He and his wife, Annie, have given up their summer barbecues ever since an estimated 1,000 starlings took over the premises, arriving each dusk and departing with the dawn.

"And we've got no idea about how to get rid of them either," said Mrs. Winter, who with her husband operates a grocery. "We left the station wagon under the sycamore one night and it went right to the car wash in the morning. We don't leave it there any more."

Said Winter: "Next year, I just hope they forget about us."

HOLLYWOOD — The master of suspense films, Alfred Hitchcock, celebrated his 75th birthday Tuesday and said there is no mystery about his longevity: He likes people and he likes to work.

At a birthday party Tuesday, he and his wife, Alma, whom he married in 1962, received a host of Hollywood celebrities, most of whom have performed in at least one of the 52 films he has directed.

Hitchcock's guests included Cary Grant, Paul Newman and his wife Joanne Woodward, Jane Wyman, George Peppard, Jackie Cooper, and Rod Taylor.

LONDON — Irish novelist and playwright Kate O'Brien died Tuesday in hospital near her home in Faversham, Kent. She was 76.

Miss O'Brien, born in Limerick, published her first novel, Without My Cloak, in 1931. A tale of middle-class Irish life, it won the two premier British literary prizes of the day.

Most of her other novels and plays had an Irish background. But her most popular book, That Lady published in 1946, was an historical novel set in Spain, where she lived for a time.

STOKE-ON-TRENT, England — British Rail, the state-run railroad, advertised it as a mystery tour. It was.

The engineer forgot to pick up the 300 customers and stopped at the wrong station, British Rail said today. He was reprimanded.

LOVELAND, Colo. — One of the five write-in votes in Tuesday's hospital board election was for Richard Nixon. "He needs a job," the voter wrote on the ballot.

WARWICK, England — The Rev. Graeme Hands moved behind the bar of the Seven Stars Pub this week to give bartender Ken Smith a vacation.

"I'm getting the chance to meet parishioners who don't pop in across the road," said Rev. Smith, whose church is opposite the Seven Stars.

Dummy Gets the Break

MCALESTER, OKLA. (UPI) — It's one of the oldest tricks in the world. But it still works.

Joseph Siebert, 38, serving a 150-year sentence for armed robbery at a state penitentiary, stuffed a dummy in his cell bunk sometime Saturday.

During an exercise period Saturday afternoon, he climbed to the top of the prison's old aministration building where he hid until nightfall. Then he scaled the prison's walls and escaped.

The guards that patrolled Siebert's cell block didn't think anything was amiss. They thought he was a deep sleeper, but nothing more unusual than that.

Then at 4 p.m. Monday, they decided Siebert had slept long enough. They shook the lump in Siebert's bed and discovered the dummy.

State corrections director Russell Lash said today he was not amused by the way Siebert duped his guards.

"I consider the escape at McAlester a very serious breach of security and I plan to personally conduct an investigation," Lash said.

Siebert was still missing today. But another convict who tried the same trick was found hiding in the exercise yard.

Bar Head Dies

ROSWELL, N.M. (AP) — Ross Malone, 63, president of the American Bar Association in 1958, died Tuesday, three days before he was to be honored by the lawyers' group he once headed. Malone, who was vice-president and general counsel for General Motors Corp., had been ill for some time.

Make the summer of '74 a woods exploration year.

Growing numbers of people are discovering the exhilarating enjoyment of treks to the woods of Vancouver Island. We'd like to share a few of our outing ideas with you.

A popular day trip for many Victoria residents is a 45-mile drive to scenic Jordan River for a picnic lunch at the beachside picnic site developed for public use by employees of Rayonier Canada's Jordan River (C.P.S.) logging division. After lunch it's just a 15-mile drive westward to Sombrio Point for a brisk hike down to the beach over trails constructed by Rayonier forestry personnel. The rewards for your effort are: a sweeping view of Juan de Fuca Strait, tidal pools and sections of sandy beach where animal tracks can sometimes be seen.

Rayonier's Jordan River picnic site is just one of several Vancouver Island recreational developments undertaken by the company. Some of the others are a wildflower reserve near Lake Cowichan and a system of boat launch ramps, viewpoints and overnight camp sites on Northern Vancouver Island. The newest development, to be open this summer, is an overnight camp site on the San Josef River, near the Cape Scott Provincial Park on Northern Vancouver Island. Public use of these facilities is welcomed. All that is asked is that fire prevention be practised. During periods of extremely hot weather it is suggested a check be made with the nearest Forest Service or company logging division office to determine if the area you wish to visit is open.

Those planning a trip to Northern Vancouver Island are reminded that services are limited there. Therefore, it would be best to plan, carefully, before making a trip to that region. To assist you Rayonier Canada has published a Visitors Guide to Northern Vancouver Island, available at many tourist information outlets or obtainable by contacting the Public Relations Department, Rayonier Canada Limited. 1111 West Georgia Street, Vancouver, B.C. V6E 3H1.

Have a pleasant summer!

Katy Makes Big Splash in Modelling

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Katy Allen is big in the nude modelling business.

Katy, mistress of a Victorian mansion crammed with plants, dogs, birds, a stuffed elk and a parrot named Earthquake, measures 48-35-49 and tips the scales at 235 pounds on a five-foot-five-inch frame.

She has been baring her bulk for individual artists and classes, sculptors and photographers for nine years, ever since a friend told her the Models Guild of San Francisco "needed a fat one."

"I auditioned, was accepted and I've been busy ever since," she said. "It's a full-time, happy career."

Her fee for artists is $4 an hour; photographers pay 10 times that.

Katy said that while walking around San Francisco she often is stopped by strangers who dash up and gush: "Oh, I have a picture of you in my bathroom."

The house Katy lives in is as much in demand as the 28-year-old model herself. It once belonged to her grandmother and is full of overstuffed furniture, floppy Victorian hats, beaded handbags, fans and furbelows.

Artists, said the blue-eyed model, ask her to pose among her flora and fauna, where she has been painted, sketched and sculpted.

Occasionally, she said, she even falls in love with her clients.

"That's happened several times," she smiled. "It's very nice.

"Sometimes, when 50 people are sketching me, I think: 'What am I doing here with my clothes off?' However, generally, I enjoy inspiring artists. I don't make too many comments on their work. Ninety per cent of the things they draw are themselves. I am just the thing they start with and they go off 100 different ways."

Katy says life is much too good for her to consider expanding into a big-time scene such as New York.

Katy rises at 6:30 a.m., cleans her two-storey house, models from 9 a.m. until noon, takes afternoons off for a promenade or shopping, then returns to feed and water the flora and fauna and feather dust the elk and bookcase armadillo.

At 6:30 p.m. there's another modelling session, and after wards preparations for one of her beloved dinner parties.

She has no intention of shedding any of her money-making poundage since her physician has told her that she's healthy.

"I've been plump," she admitted, pouring teas and nibbling on petit fours. "When my doctor tells me the weight is affecting my health, I'll lose weight."

Katy's favorite hobby is cooking, and she says she's writing a cookbook aimed at people who want to serve large, elegant gatherings.

Between times, Katy likes to luxuriate in a perfumed tub.

Love Amid Ruins

LONDON (AP) — A group of sun worshippers camped in the shadow of mysterious Stonehenge, Britain's oldest ruin, say they will counter any police attempt to move them with expressions of love.

"We love everybody, including the bailiffs and the police," one of the members of the tribe of about 40 who have occupied the ruin since June 21, said.

A London court ruled Monday that the group, known as the wallies, had no right to set up their makeshift assortment of tents and shelters at Stonehenge, a mysterious circle of stone monoliths dating back about 4,000 years. Archaeologists have had little luck in discovering the actual purpose of Stonehenge, but a common theory holds that it was a burial site.

Authorities were not expected to put the court order into effect for about a week. The wallies have vowed there will be no violence and if love fails, they will move their camp five yards to a tract which is not government property.

The wallies, who named themselves after a stray dog they befriended at a pop festival on the Isle of Wight, list their address as "Fort Wally, care of God, Jesus, Budha, Garden of Allah, and Stonehenge monument."

They said God ordered them to camp in the shadow of the ruin.

SUN WORSHIPPERS, the Wiltshire Wallies, sit together near Britain's ancient Stonehenge monument. The group claims God told them to set up camp near the circle of stone monoliths located on the Salisbury Plain. But a London court has ruled the group had no right setting up the camp and has issued a writ demanding an explanation.

Weatherman Holds Key To Famine

New York Times

WASHINGTON — Bad weather this summer and the threat of more of it to come hangs ominously over every estimate of the world food situation.

It is a threat the world may have to face more and more in the years ahead. Many weather scientists expect greater variability in our planet's weather and, consequently, more risk of local disaster in places where conditions of recent years have become accepted as the norm.

Some experts believe we are on the threshold of a new pattern of global climate for which mankind is ill prepared. Others disagree, but are still concerned over weather's impact on man's ability to feed the ever-increasing numbers of human beings on earth.

Whether or not this year's events are harbingers of a major global trend, some of those events are, themselves, causing concern.

The monsoon rains have been late and scant over agriculturally important regions of India, while Bangladesh has been having floods. Parts of Europe and the Soviet Union have had problems at both ends of the weather spectrum this year—too hot and dry at some times and places, too wet and cold at others.

There have been similar problems in North America. Recently one United States weather expert received reports that ice is lingering abnormally on the coasts of Newfoundland and that new evidence shows the Gulfstream to be fluctuating toward a more southerly course.

In the United States, the world's most important food producer, a severe drought that began last fall in the Southwest has spread northward and eastward. Its effects are having potentially serious repercussions in the corn belt. There have also been recent reports that spring wheat in the United States has been badly hurt by hot, dry weather.

Earlier this year there had been hopes of bumper crops in North America and elsewhere. Under the impact of weather some of these hopes have been trimmed back.

Canadian Prospects Good

The situation is not all bad. The prospects for Canada are said to look reasonably good, depending on what happens during the next few weeks. Aside from some floods, Australia has had no serious problems, according to experts in the U.S. The Soviet Union has predicted a high grain yield, largely on the basis of a good winter wheat crop. But spring wheat, accounting for about 35 per cent of that nation's total, may be suffering from persistent high temperatures and strong winds.

It appears that what is happening now and what will happen in the next few weeks in many areas of the world may be crucial for food production this year.

The mid-July world grain outlook of the U.S. Department of Agriculture called the situation somewhat less favorable than it was a month earlier.

All of the signs, good and bad, are bing watched closely by specialisits in weather and its effects on agriculture.

In the whole complex equation of food, resources and population the element that is least controllable and predictable is weather. Yet weather can spell the difference between abundance and disaster almost anywhere.

This year, experts in weather, climate and agriculture have given much thought to the prospects for the coming years and decades.

A workshop convened by the International Federation of Institutes for Advanced Study prepared a detailed report on the impact of climate change on the quality and character of human life.

Weather Predictions Grim

The summary statement of that report is one of the grimmest forecasts to be made in recent years. Dr. Walter Orr Roberts, one of the nation's foremost scientists in the field of climate, believes there is a growing consensus in his field that agrees with the workshop's assessment.

"The studies of many scholars of climate change attest that a new climatic pattern is now emerging," said the workshop summary statement. "There is a growing consensus that the change will persist for several decades and that the current food-production systems of man cannot easily adjust. It is also expected that the climate will become more variable than in recent decades."

"We believe that this climatic change poses a threat to the people of the world," said the summary. "The direction of climate change indicated major crop failures almost certainly within the decade. This, coinciding with a period of almost non-existent grain reserves, can be ignored only at the risk of great suffering and mass starvation."

2 Young Judges Traditionalists

VANCOUVER (CP) — Two of British Columbia's youngest provincial court judges are traditionalists when it comes to the bench.

Randall Wong, 33, and Jack McGivern, 34, both believe in gowning, wearing the traditional black robe.

"You use it to help you assert that particular authority," said Judge Wong, who also believes his age may help him understand a young offender's motives.

"I suppose you could probably relate and understand a little bit more because you grew up in the same era," he said.

"But I would probably not understand somebody who was, say, my father's age and giving an explanation. I might have a little more difficulty trying to relate to what he is trying to say."

Judge Wong was born and grew up in the city's east end, waiting on tables and sweeping floors after school in his father's restaurant.

He graduated from the University of B.C. in 1966, spent a year articling, then went to nearby Burnaby as a provincial prosecutor.

He spent two years there, then 15 months as a federal prosecutor in Vancouver before being appointed Crown prosecutor in Whitehorse, Y.T.

When he was named a provincial court judge in February, it was the first time a person of Chinese origin had been appointed to the bench.

"I suppose with minority groups there are certain things you may understand better," he said. But there were also problems.

"I may go in there with preconceived standards, being a member of the same ethnic group and say, 'You did not live up to the expectations the Chinese community expects you to and for that you're guilty.' "

Judge McGivern, however, said a lawyer's training teaches him how to deal with people no matter who they are.

"As lawyers we get to know people and how they think." Judge McGivern began working part-time for his father's law firm after his second year at UBC. When he graduated in 1964, he went to work full-time.

Both judges agree that the bench has its disadvantages.

"As practitioners we were pretty free to kick up our in B.C. heels," said Judge Wong.

"There are some places, perhaps there's nothing wrong with doing there, but you have to think twice when you're a judge. It's the same with certain people and there are organizations you can't belong to."

"It's a difficult decision to make as a younger man because it's a pretty final decision," said Judge McGivern.

"When you finally decide you're going to go on the bench, that's final.

"You don't decide, 'Well, I'm going to try it for a week' and then say, 'Well I'm going back to practice.'

"That's a commitment."

Chamber Seeks Wharf Street Convention Centre

The Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce has urged the city of Victoria to consider a Wharf Street location for convention centre.

In a brief presented to council's central business district advisory committee Monday, the chamber's recommendations are for the Inner Harbor foreshore between the Causeway and Johnson Street Bridge.

"The chamber feels that of all the alternatives the civic convention centre would be an ideal development.

"Having regard for both the suitability of the area and the needs of the city, the Ocean Cement site would seem to be an ideal location for the centre itself and the Reid Property could be used for a multi-level parking garage."

The brief also states that any development should be people, water and tourist oriented and could alternatively include marina facilities or if possible Fishermen's Wharf Annex, theatres, museums, restaurants or underground shopping malls.

Ald. Sam Bawlf, who chairs the committee, said city council would consider the latest proposed location along with former suggestions that a conference centre be located near the Empress Hotel.

High Stakes In Buffalo

HELENA, Mont. (AP) — The buffalo market is bullish. Here on the high plains of the Rocky Mountain country, ranchers who started raising buffalo as a novelty or hobby now find they have some valuable beasts romping around.

Markets and restaurants are ordering buffalo meat in record amounts.

Bob Schall, a Montana rancher who one of a handful raising buffalo, is still kicking himself for liquidating part of his herd in recent years. Prices are up, demand unprecedented.

Great herds of buffalo, numbering an estimated 20 million in the mid-1800s, once roamed the plains. They were slaughtered for their hides and for meat as settlers moved westward. Historians said there were only 551 in 1889 when the federal government took emergency action to save them from extinction.

Roy Houck, president of the National Buffalo Association, who operates a 50,000-acre buffalo ranch west of Pierre, S.D., said there are about 30,000 buffalo in the United States today. About 5,000 of them are refugees or in federal parks. The rest are owned privately.

20,000 IN CANADA

Houck, who believes he is the largest U.S. buffalo feeder with a herd of 3,500, not including this year's calf crop, said there are 20,000 buffalo in Canada.

If a rancher can keep the animals behind stout fences, odds are there's money to be made. But keeping them fenced isn't easy. Large bulls have been known to reach 3,000 pounds.

The average buffalo weighs from 1,600 to 2,000 pounds and roams constantly over great stretches of grassland.

Top-weight cattle, by comparison, usually don't exceed 1,500 pounds and lack the buffalo's wanderlust.

Schall said raising buffalo has been akin to a poker game and he lost one hand.

"If I'd seen this increased demand I probably would have fenced a little better and not liquidated."

He had about 150 animals but cut the herd to about 50 on the 6,000-acre ranch he operates on the Flathead Indian reserve.

"I got started in this as a hobby, but the buffalo have been real good for the ranch," he said. Schall recently shipped some heifer calves to Idaho for about $400 each. He has customers in Washington as well, and in his own region.

Houck said buffalo slaughtered for commercial purposes, in any volume, began 10 to 12 years ago.

He operates his own slaughter and processing plant. Some of the meat is processed at federally inspected plants, such as one in Rapid City, S.D. But Houck noted buffalo is still considered "a wild animal," and U.S. restrictions are not as stringent as those for slaughtering beef cattle, although all commercial outlets are state-inspected.

CAREFUL SELECTION

"Most slaughter animals are surplus males and old cows. All producing females are kept. I don't know of any productive animals used for slaughter anywhere."

Pound for pound, buffalo meat sells at prices 25-to 50-per cent higher than beef. A grass-fed buffalo is slaughtered at three to four years of age. Grain-fed cattle go to market when they're two.

Houck said "demand is way in excess of supply and the problem is distribution." He said some distributors are leery of adding buffalo beef to their product line for fear the supply will run out.

Jim Salmond, his brother and father operate a 60,000-acre ranch west of Choteu on the east side of the Continental Divide where their 75 buffalo roam between the Sun and Teton rivers.

"They just travel wherever they want to go. They're on the move all the time."

BIG SALE TO JAPAN

The Salmonds recently sold 1,000 pounds of buffalo bull meat to Japan at $1 a pound, for use at a banquet. At the time, that was about 40 per cent more than the same amount of beef would have brought.

Some purchasers are allowed to hunt their own animals in the fall, shooting them from the herd and letting ranch operators handle the meat.

The Jack Gehring Ranch northwest of Helena supports 28 buffalo along with cattle herds. The family started raising the animals in 1959 as a novelty.

Jack Gehring Jr. said the animals sell for $750 each, the price including the valuable head and hide.

Gehring said some persons fear the meat will have a wild taste. But he says he finds it tender and comparable to beef—and there's more money to be made on it.

RETIRED POOL THEIR ABILITY IN ARBITRATION

TORONTO (CP) — A group of retired Canadians is working on an arbitration system which eventually may solve some problems of consumers and businesses without a lot of bickering or litigation.

The group, Arbitrations and Arbitrators (A and A), is the brainchild of retired construction executive Lionel J. McGowan, a former president of Foundation Co. of Canada and later chairman of Taylor Woodrow of Canada.

Unlike Britain and the United States, Canada has no existing organized body of arbitration expertise.

A and A, run mostly by retired personnel with the help of a $30,800 grant under the federal government's New Horizons program, does not propose to do any arbitrating.

Besides providing an outlet for capable people who have left the everyday business scene, it will help recruit and select persons who want to become arbitrators, organize seminars and promote the arbitration procedure.

Mr. McGowan says that arbitrators can come from a variety of backgrounds, but the most important qualification is "judicial capacity to reach a decision based on the evidence before them."

Expertise in the subject matter of the dispute will be helpful and sometimes essential.

Mr. McGowan, a fellow of Britain's Institute of Arbitrators, says Canada should abandon the practice of three-member arbitration tribunals, which are perhaps most familiar in the labor field and which he calls "unnecessarily costly."

In three-member tribunals where each disputant names a member and the third is a neutral referee, it is the latter who usually makes the decision, he says.

The arbitration faculty would try to encourage business groups such as travel and home-building associations to include arbitration clauses in sales contracts as has been done in Britain and the U.S.

Families Plant Ideas For Future Garden Use

Planning the garden for more use in the future may have taken a back seat this year in favor of growing more vegetables and small fruits at home, but a firm idea of your future needs has meanwhile had a chance to materialize.

You now find that getting value from the vegetable plantings entails being at home more evenings and weekends than previously. You discover something each day ready to gather for instant enjoyment — not only from July on, but from earliest spring if you made an early start with the garden. Next season, you'll be busy there earlier.

Someone says on a hot summer day, "Why don't we have a place to sit out here and have supper (or lunch or breakfast)?" Or "why can't I shell all these peas or cut the beans here instead of in the house?"

Remember these things, for they are ideas from the family.

Putting them into practice will cost less than buying a camper or a boat for weekend trips. Although lumber is high in price and poor in quality, if the construction is good a shelter, benches and table is not a continuing expense.

While summer is still with us is the time to make notes of a suitable spot on the property for assembling a more or less permanent leisure area.

You may call it a patio perhaps in today's custom, but a southern patio is scarcely possible or suitable in our climate any more than is an English summerhouse.

Your chief need is to have overhead and west side shade from sun, at the same time arranging for overhead air circulation.

Tree shade is ideal, but few new homes have this ready made. Wood slats and fast growing annual climbers will give you results while more permanent shade from a suitable tree and climbing vines is growing.

Another necessity is a firm level floor area. When I see truckloads of usedbricks going out to be dumped, I think of the play area, leisure gardens, low brick walls and paths which could be built by recycling instead of destroying these discarded bricks.

Books on garden structures are on public library shelves; plans can be bought already worked out with specifications, but — you still must adapt someone else's plans to fit your situation.

If you are empty of ideas, a book with drawings and sketches may help with getting your mind into producing thoughts. From there on, if you have any affinity for wood, hammer and nails, and know how to plan on paper you are away on the first step.

Don't cut down on your vegetable garden size. Rather, take in the whole grassed area (this lessens garden work), using part of the space for your leisure area and extending into it the permanent small fruit section as an attractive garden beside your leisure area.

When fall and early winter come it will be hard to remember just where summer sun reaches.

On a sunny day or two now is the time to play around a bit, putting in a few stakes, making a paper plan, and getting ideas coming for working on later this year.

SOLUTION THURSDAY

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

Amongst the experts, it is deemed to be a "fact" that in most deals there is usually some clue in the bidding or early stages of play that pinpoints the way to the winning line of play. Today's deal, which came up in a team-of-four match, is presented in partial substantiation of this theme. Both sides vulnerable. South deals.

NORTH
♠ K 10 8 4
♡ J 8
◇ 6 5 3

WEST
♠ 5
♡ A 10 3 2
◇ J 8 7 4
♣ K 6 5 4

EAST
♠ Q 7 3
♡ K Q 9 6 5 4
◇ Q 10 9
♣ 9

SOUTH
♠ A J 9 6 2
♡ 7
◇ A K 2
♣ A Q 7 3

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♠	Pass
4 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Four of ♣.

When this deal was played the first time, West's opening lead of the club four was covered by dummy's ten. The ten-spot won the trick as East followed suit with the nine.

It seemed to South that East's nine was almost surely a singleton. South concluded from this that since East was short in clubs, he, rather than West, rated to be "long" in trumps. Following his feelings, at trick two he cashed dummy's king of trumps, after which he led the trump ten. When East played low, South did likewise.

As is evident, the ten-spot won the trick. A third trump lead was made next, East's queen falling to South's ace. When play had ended, South had fulfilled his contract, losing one heart, one diamond, and one club.

When the deal was replayed, our new South declarer also arrived at a four-space contract, via the same sequence of bidding as presented above. But this West defender, unlike his counterpart when the deal was played originally, did not lead a low club at trick one. Instead he chose to open the ace of hearts. He then continued with a second heart, East's queen being ruffed by South.

With no clue to guide him (i.e., East's presumed possession of a singleton club), our South declarer now made the normal play in a nine-card suit headed by the ace, king, and jack: he cashed the king and ace of trumps, hoping to fell the queen. And so East's queen of trumps was promoted into a winning trick, and South ended up going down one, losing a trick in each suit.

Thus the first North-South pair scored 620 points for bidding and making a vulnerable spade game. And their teammates, sitting East-West on the reply, scored 100 points for defeating South's four-spade contract.

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. H. Hunter

We have 2279 for the game today. Two 2's, one 7, and one 9. Using all four each time, but no other digits at all, you form expressions for the consecutive numbers from one up.

Any arithmetical signs may be used, but no summation of factorial symbols. Don't forget decimals, regular and repeater, also roots and powers (no extra digits). For example, 72—9x2 is a solution for 65.

The limit without a break in continuity seems to be 108. I shall be glad to check solutions, and will send hints to help in future games if requested.

HAZARDOUS intersection at Esquimalt and Maitland lived up to its reputation Monday afternoon when seven-year-old bicyclist Warren Ladner, 701 Esquimalt, centre of attention above, collided with van driven by Debora Lynn Larusson, 20, of 919 Parklands. Boy was taken to Victoria General with head cuts, kept overnight, and released Tuesday morning. Residents in area have long protested the unsafe conditions at intersection. Stay on Budget for Art

TORONTO (CP) — When the time comes to buy a painting, stay within a fixed budget and, if buying for investment, stay with an established dealer.

This is the advice of Hugh Pryce-Jones, director of development of the Art Gallery of Ontario, to anyone embarking on the purchase of a first painting.

Mr. Pryce-Jones recommends buying two or three pieces as it may be discouraging to have only one.

"Spend your weekends talking to various dealers and establish the kind of work and artists they handle. Make yourself known to them."

Mr. Pryce-Jones said he has learned more from dealers about art than he has in textbooks.

The Professional Art Dealers Association provides names of more than 20 dealers in Toronto and elsewhere, all of whom have been established for at least five years.

If you buy a painting and tire of it, most galleries provide brief approval periods before purchase or work something out with you after the sale. But remember that you bought at retail price and would be selling back wholesale and that the gallery might charge a commission, he said.

"One less troublesome way of establishing your tastes is to rent your work before you buy it."

Mr. Pryce-Jones sees the print market as an opportunity for young people on a limited budget. He cautions buyers to check whether the print is of limited edition and signed by the artist.

Unauthenticated and unattributable works are best avoided; although there are exceptions, they are not usually wise as investments.

Shun reproductions as they are valueless and buy only with whom artists you are familiar.

When buying photographs, Mr. Pryce-Jones suggested accepting only archival prints, which are black and white prints processed to last at least 100 years. Find out whether the negative has been retired as rarety affects the price.

New Zoo With Old Woes

TORONTO (CP) — There's a leak in the hippopotamuses' pool, the lions' moat isn't wide enough and the polar bear family is waiting while contractors balk at working overtime to finish their display.

The new Metropolitan Toronto Zoo — scheduled to open Thursday — is having a few problems.

Lion experts have decided the moat separating the animals from the public can be easily vaulted by a healthy lion and have closed the display for two weeks for redesigning.

Five adult lions will spend the two weeks in the safer confines of the old Riverdale Zoo. But visitors will still be able to view lion cubs in part of the display, and mothers with younger cubs will be seen behind glass in the maternity ward.

the two seeks in the safer confines of the old Riverdale Zoo. But visitors will still be able to view lion cubs in part of the display, and mothers with younger cubs will be seen behind glass in the maternity ward.

Zoo spokesmen say many details of the polar bear display will be just barely ready or unfinished for Thursday's opening because of labor problems.

The search for where the water is leaking to from the hippo pool has so far proven fruitless. In the meantime, the hoppopotamus family — mother, father and their calf — will be relocated in the African storage area.

Thief Skates On Thin Ice

There's a person or persons skating on thin ice — especially if the local constabulary catch them.

City Police report 12 pairs of ice skates were stolen from the skate shop at Memorial Arena sometime Sunday or Monday.

There's no sign of forced entry.

The icemaker's office had also been entered, but it was not known if anything was taken.

N. America Corn Yield Drop Seen

WASHINGTON (AP) — Government farm experts say sharply lower corn yields will bring consumers in the United States a temporary easing of beef prices toward the end of this year.

But the experts also warn that the reduced corn crop, down 12 per cent from last year, will eventually translate into higher retail meat prices in 1975.

While U.S. corn growers watch their crops being battered by a drought in the Midwest, indications are that this year's corn crop in Ontario — which accounts for about 85 per cent of Canada's acreage — will be about average.

While the average yield is expected to drop slightly 82.3 bushels per acre compared with last year's 86 bushels—the total expected crop will be slightly larger than last year's due to an extra 75,000 acres being planted to corn in the province this year.

Total provincial production, based on the current expected yield, will be 102.9 million bushels, up 1.9 per cent from 1973.

The drought in much of the U.S. Midwest, the prime reason for less feed next season, will force more cattle on to the market this fall because of rising production costs and dried-up pastures.

Agriculture Secretary Earl Butz predicted Tuesday that the reduced corn crop will mean "some curtailment" of cattle feeding and the sale of more cattle for slaughter later this fall.

No Fast Settlement Seen for Rail Talks

OTTAWA (CP) — Railway unions and company negotiators have got off to an early start in bargaining for a new contract this year, but results of the first encounter seemed to provide scant hope for an easy settlement.

Cost-of-living increases to offset rises in consumer prices figure largely in union shopping lists as their negotiators seek a reopening of existing agreements covering about 100,000 workers.

But talks at an unofficial early start of negotiations for the renewal of contracts abruptly ended Monday in Montreal when company officials representing CP Rail and Canadian National Railways offered an extension of the existing agreements to the end of 1975, with wage adjustments to cover cost-of-living increases.

The bad news for unions was a second part of the proposal which advocated a freeze on fringe benefits until 1976. Fringes often account for about one-third of total company outlays.

Current agreements, which apply to 56,000 non-operating workers, 22,000 shopcraft tradesmen and about 20,000 running trades, expire at the end of this year. The non-ops now earn average hourly pay of $4.39, the shopcrafts average about $5.27 and the trainmen about $5.85.

But the early start of negotiations, which normally get underway in the fall, may not be lost.

Richard Smith, chairman of the non-ops negotiating committee, sent a telegram to company officials Tuesday asking them for a further meeting Thursday to clarify positions of the two sides.

A request from 17 railway unions for a special cost-of-living increase to apply before the expiration of current agreements led to the early start this year.

The unions say the arbitration award of Emmett Hall, retired Supreme Court of Canada justice, delivered last January, underestimated increases in the consumer price index this year.

The award took into account inflation at 7.5 per cent but latest figures show the 12-month increase from July last year to July, 1974, was 11.3 per cent.

"We feel an immediate increase in the wage rate is justified to bring pay up to what was intended by the arbitrator," Ed Finn of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers said Tuesday.

Finn said ill feeling arose among CNR employees particularly when workers for the Crown corporation saw that a $500 cost-of-living bonus was paid to federal public servants and staff of the CBC and Air Canada while railwaymen were left out. That led to wildcat walkouts in Montreal and Edmonton earlier this summer.

The unions say they are not ready yet to reject fully the idea of a one-year extension of existing agreements and cost-of-living provisions, as proposed by the companies Monday. But the freeze on fringes was too much for the unions to swallow it was termed "unrealistic."

"The unions are prepared to look at the extension idea," one union source said Tuesday.

'ABANDONED' CANOE SOON CLAIMED

Victoria police were on their toes Monday afternoon after a citizen reported a canoe lying on a boulevard at Fort and Foul Bay.

They whisked out, put the canoe on a truck, and took it to the police station.

Thirty minutes later they received a call from a man lamenting someone had stolen his canoe.

It seems he had left it on the boulevard while his car was being lubricated in a garage across the street.

Separatists Heckle PM At Francophone Rally

QUEBEC (CP) — Hecklers waving banners and shouting separatist slogans disrupted speeches Tuesday by Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau and Quebec Premier Robert Bourassa at opening of the first International Festival for Francophone Youth.

The demonstrators, kept back by police and crowd barriers, booed and chanted at any mention of Canada's role of host in speeches stressing hopes for the solidarity of an co-operation among francophone nations.

From a blue and white striped canopy in front of the legislature building Prime Minister Trudeau told the brightly dressed delegations from 24 countries that "the majority of Canadians would not greet you in this way."

He said the "loudmouths" in the crowd would never be able to get together on anything, even a demonstration, and he added that he hoped their "spirits would be enlarged by the spirit of international co-operation of this festival."

Trudeau said Quebec had worked in close co-operation with Ottawa in preparing the festival being held under the sponsorship of the Paris-based Agency for Cultural and Technical Co-operation set up in 1970 to promote exchanges between French-speaking countries.

He said delegations of French-speaking youngsters from Ontario, Manitoba and New Brunswick had come to the 12-day festival with the co-operation of their provincial governments and this showed the equilibrium of the Canadian nation.

The demonstrators, forming a solid knot among the crowd spilling over the street in front of the national assembly, shouted "Quebec Libre-Free Quebec" and waved Quebec fleur-de-lis flags and a banner which read "Bienvenue dans notre pays de Kebek—Welcome to our country of Kebek."

Members of the Quebec section of the Canadian delegation to the festival joined in the shouting, which first erupted during flag-raising ceremonies opening the festival.

The Quebec flag was raised along with the flags of Canada, Manitoba, New Brunswick and Ontario while O Canada

"The Quebec flag should have been raised by itself," said Pierre Bourgeault, a sculptor with the Quebec group. "The festival is being held in Quebec and we must be recognized as a separate entity."

Vietnam Asylum Bombed

SAIGON (UPI) — Communist gunners shelled a mental hospital and two villages near the sprawling Bien Hoa air base today, the Saigon command said.

Officers said the three-round rocket barrage missed the base, 14 miles northeast of Saigon, but gutted a mental hospital nearby in a direct hit, killing one patient and 14 other civilians and wounding nine persons.

Two rockets hit nearby villages and wounded five persons, the command said.

Since last Saturday, 67 rockets have hit Bien Hoa air base, killing at least three persons. Military sources said nine F5 jets have been damaged by the attacks.

Bien Hoa is the major air base for the Saigon area. A large number of warplanes and helicopters are stationed there for use in the provinces surrounding the capital.

A Viet Cong spokesman, Maj. Phuong Nam, has said the attacks on Bien Hoa were to punish South Vietnamese forces "right at their staging base" for cease-fire violations.

He charged government forces had broken the Jan. 28, 1973, cease-fire declaration 3,121 times between Aug. 10 and Aug. 14.

He also charged U.S. SR71 reconnaissance planes flew over Viet Cong-controlled territory in Northern South Vietnam last Friday. U.S. spokesman, as usual, had no comment on the charge.

Commissions 'Influenced Loan Rates'

EDMONTON (CP) — The effective interest rate on a $2.2-million loan to the Alberta Housing Corp. (AHC) in 1969 was arranged so that brokers would make high commissions, a judicial inquiry was told Tuesday.

Joe Rosen of Montreal, accountant for Victor Farkas, the broker who obtained the loan from a German bank, told the inquiry that his client met Robert Mitchell, a former Chrysler Europe president, in Geneva to discuss the loan.

Mr. Rosen, who was also in Geneva, said Mr. Farkas and Mr. Mitchell did not discuss the amount of their commissions because it depended on the rate of interest offered by the bank.

If the rate was eight per cent, the addition of the men's commissions would bring the effective interest rate up to 9½ or 10 per cent, said Mr. Rosen.

He added that there were no real negotiations between Mr. Farkas and the Main Bontal Bank of Germany. Mr. Farkas only asked for the best rate.

The inquiry has been told that the actual rate of interest was nine per cent and the effective rate 10.81 per cent, at a time when money borrowed by other government agencies cost between eight and nine per cent.

Mr. Farkas testified Monday that he ultimately received $25,000 of a $198,500 commission. He said Mr. Mitchell, who put him in touch with the Main Bontal Bank, received $67,500, and Max Judlicki, a real estate broker who supplied Mr. Mitchell's name, got $12,500.

Mr. Farkas said $60,000 went to E. A. Toshach, the mayor of Drumheller, Alta., who suggested the AHC was in the market for a loan. An associate of Mr. Farkas who introduced him to Mr. Toshach, a Mr. Schlien, was given $20,000.

The Main Bontal Bank received $11,000 and Mr. Rosen got $2,500.

Mr. Mitchell indicated he had to share his commission with someone else, said Mr. Rosen. The accountant said "it seemed like someone at the bank."

Mr. Rosen also acknowledged that a written statement given Bob Orysiuk, former AHC executive director, was partly erroneous.

The statement was prepared by Mr. Rosen because the AHC official "wanted something written."

"What struck me as odd was that the people who came to borrow knew very little about borrowing—even less than I did," said Mr. Rosen.

Arguments End On Mine Tax Bill

REGINA (CP) — Lawyers for the Saskatchewan government and a Calgary-based oil company completed submissions to the Saskatchewan Court of Queen's Bench Tuesday and began what may be a two-month wait for a judgment.

After the summations Mr. Justice E. M. Hughes of Saskatoon said he expects to spend September and at least part of October writing his decision on the constitutional validity of Bill 42, the controversial oil and gas legislation passed last December.

After that, there will likely be appeals. All parties in the dispute have indicated the probability that the case will eventually go before the Supreme Court of Canada.

Before adjournment Tuesday, there was a brief rebuttal by a lawyer representing Canadian Industrial Gas and Oil Ltd. (CIGOL), the plaintiff, in response to two days of final arguments by a lawyer for the government.

W. M. Elliott of Regina, Cigol Lawyer, said George Taylor, government lawyer, had misinterpreted Cigol's case in at least one respect.

Elliott outlined once again his arguments that a mineral income tax and royalty surcharge imposed by Bill 42 are both indirect taxes which only the federal government may levy.

SMOKE DETECTORS EDMONTON 'MUST'

EDMONTON (CP) — Owners of apartments and hotels will be given one year to install smoke detectors in their buildings, following a decision by city council Tuesday.

The new bylaw also applies to insitutional buildings with sleeping accommodation, and new construction, including single family homes.

The latter provision means that contractors would be responsible for installation when they build homes and that the individual home builder would be responsible for his own installation.

Fire Chief Louis Day said there are similar bylaws in other Canadian cities, including Toronto.

The bylaw provides for a $100 penalty but the fire department intends to be "flexible" in its inspection, he said. However, court action would be initiated if an owner directly refused orders requiring installation.

Smoke detectors are small devices, costing about $89 each and less when purchased in large numbers, which detect both visible and invisible particles of combustion.

The bylaw requires one detector be installed within 10 feet of access to each room designed as sleeping accommodation. Attachment will be to the ceiling or on the wall within 12 inches of the ceiling.

STANFIELD

Tory Chief To Quit

OTTAWA (CP) — Robert Stanfield announced today he will step down within two years as national Progressive Conservative leader and will not run in the next federal election.

He told a news conference after the first party caucus since its July 8 election defeat that he agreed to stay on for an indefinite period as leader after caucus members approved conditions he demanded.

He said he set three specific conditions on continuing on an interim basis:

—That he would not lead the party in another election unless one were called unexpectedly, ahead of the expected timing in 1978.

—That he be free to pick his own departure date on the basis of his judgment of what is best for the party.

—That he not be limited to any set period for continuing in office, such as six months or a year or some other fixed length of time.

He said his position was given broad general approval by the caucus, although consent was not unanimous.

"I did not expect unanimity; I did not demand unanimity."

Mr. Stanfield, elected leader in 1967 and defeated in three elections, said he made up his mind to resign well before the caucus meeting.

Having done so, he said, he leans toward an early resignation. But he would make the decision after assessing carefully what would be best for the party.

He said it is reasonable to assume that his departure will come before the next general party convention which must, by the party's constitution, be held by March, 1976.

The last convention was in March this year and the constitution stipulates that a general convention must be held every two years.

It also contains a clause for an automatic leadership review by ordering that a poll be taken on whether delegates favor a leadership convention.

Mr. Stanfield said he would quit and leave the party leaderless if he ever lost the substantial support of his caucus. But he would not let a small group of caucus dissidents upset his plan to stay on until a leadership convention can be arranged.

Thanks A Lot, Dave

Sheila Hobbs of 674 Grenville had a few problems returning home from work Tuesday afternoon.

While driving along Esquimalt Road her car, "an old junker," stalled, blocking a long line of traffic.

She got out and saw "a big beautiful gold car" stopped behind her.

"See if your bumpers meet, the man in the car said.

They did.

He got her started, but the car stalled a second time, so he gave her another push.

This time she looked at the man and "could hardly believe my eyes."

"Thanks a lot, Dave," she called out with a wave of her hand.

Premier Dave ... Barrett, that is.

GREEKS QUIT NATO

Turkish Blitz Attack Cuts Cyprus in Half

Times News Services

Turkey overran much of eastern Cyprus today with massive air, artillery and tank attacks that levelled the industrial area of Nicosia, surrounded UN troops at the Nicosia airport and smashed to within five miles of the Greek Cypriot port of Famagusta.

The attacks all but cut Cyprus in two.

The United Nations announced a cease-fire had been agreed in the capital of Nicosia tonight, but firing continued after it went into effect.

The attacks brought Greece and Turkey close to war and threatened to collapse NATO's southern flank but Turkish Premier Bulent Ecevit, in announcing Turkish victories, said in Ankara he believed the attacks would not bring a Turkish-Greek war.

Greece announced it was withdrawing its armed forces from NATO for its failure to prevent what it called a Turkish Pearl Harbor, and Athens reports said the Greek army had been placed on a full war footing along the 99-mile frontier with Turkey.

The 14 other members of NATO pleaded with Greece to reconsider its action — which could mean the removal of U.S. nuclear deterrents from Greece, — and called on Turkey to respect the cease-fire ordered by the UN security council. The pleas had no effect.

The Geneva talks collapsed early today and Britain called an urgent session of the security council in New York at 3:30 a.. EDT. The council required only 120 minutes to pass a unanimous resolution asking for a cease-fire.

Dispatches from Nicosia and monitorings of the Greek and Turkish Cypriot radios there told of massive Turkish tank thrusts eastward from Nicosia toward the post of Famagusta and westward toward the port of Lefka — drives that would seal off northern Cyprus and effectively partition Cyprus by military force.

Beginning at dawn, wave after wave of American-made Phantom fighter-bombers of the Turkish air force streaked out of the sun to bomb and strafe the capital while Turkish artillery hammered Greek Cypriot positions in the Kyrenian mountain range about 15 miles to the north.

The Austrian defence ministry announced that three soldiers of the Austrian UN peacekeeping force were killed in the air raid.

Radio Nicosia, monitored in Israel, also said Turkish planes bombed Famagusta.

Bombs burst through the industrial section at the east end of Nicosia. It burned for hours, sending up a tower of black smoke into the clear blue sky, and industrialists who took refuge in a hotel said the damage will cripple the island's economy for years.

The heaviest fighting centered at Mia Milea, two miles northeast of Nicosia, and near the airport about five miles southwest of the capital where strong Turkish forces cut off two vital road junctions and encircled the damaged installation, a UN spokesan said.

The eruption of renewed warfare following the July 22 cease-fire wounded 20 UN soldierd, including six Finns who have been under a constant mortar barrage at their camp

Bottle exchanger Logie can't cash in

Empties Going Up

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

The deposit price for beer bottles, long 25 cents a case, is going to 60 cents, the Times has learned.

That makes 10 cases of empties worth $6, up from $2.50.

Buying 10 dozen beer now will result in a net profit of $3.50 on the bottles, when the price rises although it leaves the problem of what to do with 120 full bottles of beer.

One Victorian with a corner on the beer boittle market is not in a position to cash in on the price increase. Jake Logie, owner of Victoria Bottle Exchange, said he can only store 16,000 dozen empties at his depot at 640 Discovery Street.

Because he handles 70,000 dozen in a month, the bottles must go out to breweries almost as fast as they come in.

W. A. Bruce, chairman of the liquor administration board, confirmed that breweries are seeking an increase in the deposit rate for empties.

He said he expects the deposit rate to change at the time the cabinet rules on an application from breweries to increase the price of beer.

At present a dozen beer sells $3, with $2.75 for the product and 25 cents on the bottles. The breweries want the price to go to $3.55 a dozen, with $2.95 for the product and 60 cents for the bottles.

This might be rounded off to $3.50.

In Vancouver, spokesman for a major brewery said: "We are looking for a 60 cent deposit rate in September."

He said the 25 cent rate has been in effect since before the Second World War and no longer reflects the value of the bottles.

"Also a quarter doesn't mean as much as it used to."

British Columbia would become the second province with 5 cent deposit rate on beer bottles. Saskatchewan made the change to 60 cents a dozen on Aug. 1.

KELLY, DOUGLAS PROFITS TRIPLE

VANCOUVER (CP) — Kelly, Douglas and Co. Ltd. reported record sales and tripled profits for the first half of this year.

The food manufacturing, wholesale and retail corporation that operates Super-Valu stores and produces Nabob brand foods, reported that sales in the 24-week period ended June 15 increased to $209.6 million this year, compared with sales of $131.5 million in the same period last year.

Net earnings were $1.567 million or 60 cents a share, compared with $553,000 or 21 cents a share in the first six months of 1973.

President Victor F. MacLean said the net margin of earnings rose to .75 of one per cent of sales from .42 or one per cent a year ago.

Indian Band Ringed

Times News Services

KENORA, Ont. — Armed policemen today ringed Anicinabe Park where militant Ojibway Indians defied a government ultimatum and continued a three-week occupation of the land, which they claim is rightfully theirs.

The next move is uncertain as the armed occupation of Anicinabe Park enters its fourth week. (Pictures, Page 3.)

The Indians say they will defend the park with the assortment of weapons they say they have.

But legal authorities say the amnesty protecting the occupying Indians from prosecution is over, and police will seal off the park.

Road blocks have been set up by the police Tuesday in their promised siege of the 14-acre park but the 150 or so Indians continue to patrol the park perimeter with rifles in hand.

The Indians, led by the Ojibway Warrior Society, have said they will defend what they say is their land.

The provincial government, however, has issued an ultimatum which expired at noon Tuesday, advising the Indians that unless they left the park by the deadline, criminal charges would be brought against them.

Four persons were arrested Tuesday as the deadline expired and they attempted to leave the park. But beyond that, the police have remained in the background, maintaining road blocks and patrols but staying away from any direct confrontation.

"What is left in the park now is the hard core," warned Louis Cameron, leader of the occupation.

"We have chosen to die here. This is our blood and our flesh."

Title to the park has been at the centre of negotiations so far. The Indians say the park land was purchased with Indian funds and sold to the town without authority in 1959.

BOOK IN U.S. ONLY FOR CANADIAN HOTEL

WATERTON PARK, Alta. — Persons wanting to book a room at the Prince of Wales Hotel in Waterton Lakes National Park must apply to an office in Glacier, Mont., and a Calgary man is fighting mad about it.

Bill Perks, dean of environmental design at the University of Calgary, fired off a sizzling protest to Jud Buchanan, minister of northern affairs and Indian development, and he's set to raise a ruckus until he gets action.

Don Hummel, president of Glazier Inc., which handles reservations for six hotels including the one in Canada, said the Prince of Wales front desk staff would be "hopelessly confused" if room booking were handled otherwise.

A tourist arriving at an information office in the park can see the hotel on the brow of a nearby hill. But when he asks for a room he is told he must make a 45-60 cent call to Glacier.

72 Starving Stowaways Found on Banana Steamer

NEW YORK (UPI) — In what federal agents called "the largest roundup of South American stowaways in 30 years," some 72 chilled and emaciated Colombians and Ecuadorians were arrested Tuesday when the banana steamer "Santa Ilena" docked at a Brooklyn pier.

At least six of the aliens were sent to public health hospital on Staten Island for treatment of malnutrition and overexposure — the result of seven days in the refrigerated holds of the 12,000-ton Prudential-Grace Line freighter.

"Its the largest roundup of Latin American stowaways in 30 years in New York," a U.S. customs official said.

Dozens of customs and immigration agents boarded the cargo ship shortly after 6 a.m. when it tied up at Pier 39 on the Brooklyn waterfront, tipped by ship's personnel that there were stowaways aboard.

Ripping open hatches to the ship's holds, loaded with hundreds of banana stems from Ecuador, the agents were greeted by dozens of shivering stowaways, many of them wearing winter coats as protection against the chill of the giant refrigerators.

Fred S. Boyett, regional commissioner of customs, said others were found in the engine room.

Boyett said the vessel entered New York harbor early this morning under the surveillance of a U.S. Customs Service helicopter and a patrol boat.

He said the stowaways — all from Ecuador or Colombia — apparently boarded the ship at Buenaventura, Colombia and at Guayaquil, Ecuador, where the ship stopped to load bananas.

Customs agents said the crew first became aware of the stowaways when 10 men emerged from holds as the ship entered the Panama Canada at Balboa. The 10 were captured and put ashore.

When the ship reached the Atlantic, officials said, other stowaways were seen wandering topside. The ship then radioed New York for agents to provide help.

Violinist Virtual Prisoner

PERTH, Australia (UPI) — Russian violinist Georgi Ermolenko was a virtual prisoner in his hotel today because of the refusal of Australia's unionized airline ticket agents to believe he really wanted to go back to the Soviet Union.

Union officials said they would refuse to let him leave until he thinks it over for at least another 24 hours.

The 18-year-old musician insisted that he had voluntarily withdrawn his request for political asylum in Australia.

"Russia is my homeland and without my homeland I cannot live," Ermolenko told reporters through an interpreter. "I want to go back to my homeland."

The airline clerks for two days have refused to sell tickets for Ermolenko and other Soviet officials to leave Australia.

Ermolenko arrived Aug. 2 in Perth with the Soviet delegation to the Conference of the International Society for Music Education held at Perth University. Two days later he applied for political asylum.

But after a talk with his group leader it was announced he had changed his mind.

Airport workers refused to issue tickets to the Russians on both Monday and Tuesday.

"We are going to stick to our guns right down the line," said Jim Harding, an official of the clerks union. "We want him to have 24 hours on his own away from Russian influence."

Harding said he talked with Ermolenko and was more convinced than ever the violinist was under duress.

Ermolenko stared at him constantly, he said.

"I found it a traumatic experience," he said. "It seemed as if he had identified that I represented some ray of hope."

3-Day Week Test By Esquimalt Police

By SUSAN RUTTAN
Times Staff

Some 22 Esquimalt policemen have started pounding their beats 12 hours a day.

The police department's shift workers have gone on a 12-hour day, three-day work week for a three-month trial period, and reports so far indicate they like the change.

"They seem quite happy with the new hours," Chief Arthur Burton said today.

The policemen work two 12-hour days, then get 24 hours off, then work two 12-hour nights and get three days off. They get two half-hour meal breaks on day shift, one half-hour meal break on nights.

The new hours were proposed by the men themselves, who had read about three-day weeks being used back east, Burton said.

He said the men don't seem to get too tired on a 12-hour day, because they're doing a variety of jobs during each shift. He said he is watching to make sure fatigue doesn't become a problem.

Other places have also been experimenting with shortened work weeks, including Greater Victoria school board which ends a three-month tryout of a four-day week on Friday.

The shortened work week was optional for school board office staff, who could work for eight-and-three-quarter-hour days, work half an hour longer every day and get a long weekend every third weekend, or work normal hours.

Personnel officer Dave Coton said many employees seem to have enjoyed the shortened work week. However, it won't be continued because it goes against the union contract.

Some women with families found the longer hours interfered with getting children off to school in the morning, or getting home to prepare supper at night.

A survey will be taken to see how many employees like the change. If there's strong positive response, the four-day week could come up in union negotiations this fall, Coton said.

Also on a shortened work week are servicemen at Brian Holley Motors on Douglas, who have been working three-day weeks since June. A spokesman said the servicemen seem to like working three 12-hour days and then having four days off.

City Eyes Housing Field; Looks for Sites, Funding

By KIT COLLINS
Times Staff

Victoria city council took its first step into the housing development business Tuesday in an attempt "to fill the vacuum left by private developers who haven't come through" with solutions to the housing crisis.

City manager Jim Bramley was asked by council's caucus to draw up a job description for a housing officer who will study available funding and sites in the city that could be assembled for housing accommodation.

"Personally, I don't feel there's anything sacrosanct about getting into housing development," Mayor Peter Pollen said, endorsing the recommendation by Geof Greenhalgh, the city's planner.

"Someone's got to fill the vacuum. We've depended on private developers who just haven't come through," the mayor said.

Greenhalgh told the caucus there "is nothing to stop us from initiating housing accommodation . . . and there are sites in Vic West we could assemble, instead of waiting for the province to stumble over them.

"The capital funds are available from the province and federal government. We could do a lot."

Armed with a handful of multi-colored, multi-sized pamphlets available to the prospective householder from higher levels of government, Greenhalgh pointed out that the amount of research which has to be done necessitated the hiring of an extra body.

Locations the city could investigate, he said, include downtown fringe areas, and family accommodation in the west end of James Bay.

Initially, Pollen said, it would be "wise for council and the (Capital) Regional Board to discuss the recommendation" and he wondered "whether the regional government would be more suited for this type of work."

But Greenhalgh said the city was more directly concerned with planning and zoning and suggested it be undertaken by the city. Pollen agreed.

Ald. Sam Bawlf cautioned that the city would have to be "careful that we don't end up in competition with property-owners in the city. We have to have the interest of the neighborhoods equally at heart."

And Ald. Percy Frampton stated "we don't want to be in a management field at all. If we select sites we could decide the general concept we want and then turn it over."

The discussion was sparked after the caucus had considered the Wilderness Park co-operative housing proposal for Jackson and Summit.

The caucus decided to request the co-operative consider re-arranging plans to decrease the number of units from 38 to 29 and offer more family oriented accommodation.

HERITAGE HOMES 'VALHALLA' LASHED

The city will erect a "valhalla for old buildings, a happy hunting ground" if it starts buying heritage buildings for relocation on selected sites, Ald. Mike Young charged Tuesday.

"I'm not prepared to support a plan to buy houses. I can see justification for moving them under special circumstances but I can't see wasting money on transplanting them," Young said.

Young was referring to a recommendation from Maltwood Museum curator Martin Segger that the city form a heritage trust or foundation to buy and restore heritage buildings.

Such a foundation, said Segger, could purchase the two-acre Sea Cadet property on Robert Street along with four nearby heritage houses which could then be moved to that property.

The city's central area development and transportation committee decided to ask the province for matching grants to set up a rotating fund to buy heritage buildings to ensure their preservation and then resell them.

Young said he would like to see a vehicle for the purchase and resale of such houses on a revolving fund basis. In that case, he said, "we could sell them for what we paid for them or maybe more."

Houses suggested by Segger for preservation and relocation are at 223 Robert, 614, and 621 Seaforth and 527 Esquimalt Road. They represent the major styles characterizing Victoria's urban development during the '80s, '90s and early 1900s, he said.

Segger indicated an additional house, at 230 Robert, "in perfect condition," is also worth saving.

They'll Bounce Balls For College Credits

Camosun College students this year will be able to pick up a credit in scuba diving or tennis.

Credit courses in six "lifetime activities" — badminton, tennis, outdoor recreation, aquatics, scuba and adaptive physical fitness — are being offered for the first time.

They have been developed by Ed Fougner, who since last fall has been head of recreation and physical education at Camosun.

Each course will be about 26 hours long, and is open to any student taking three other courses.

Fougner hopes to get about 20 students enrolled in each course, but said this week this may be difficult because of communications problems at the college.

Camosun is spread around the city in different campuses, so it's hard to let all students know about programs, he said.

Also, the college has no recreation facilities of its own so must rent gymnasiums, ice rinks and pools. And getting to these facilities is sometimes a problem for students without cars.

The scuba and aquatics courses will be held at the Crystal Pool.

As physical education director for Camosun, Fougner is stressing sports which students are likely to play throughout their life rather than competitive team sports.

"I had an idea that the kind of students that came to the college would probably be interested in unstructured activities, lifetime activities," he said.

Last year was "a bit of a dog's breakfast" of activities, such as periodic canoe trips and ski trips, said Fougner.

"This year we've taken the same philosphy of lifetime pursuits and expanded it."

The Crystal Pool, rented once a week last year, will be available to students four or five times a week this year, he said.

The college has bought two sailboats, more canoes, and equipment to outfit 20 for hiking on the West Coast Trial.

Although competitive sports aren't stressed, students will be able to compete with other colleges in golf, badminton and curling, and compete locally in rugby.

C. Saanich Reels In Suspect

Central Saanich is a relatively crime-free haven, and it's not often police get a chance to tackle much in the way of theft.

But they have reeled in a suspect who they feel is responsible for at least some of the recent disappearances of tackle boxes from fishermen's boats moored at Brentwood Bay.

He's an 11-year-old boy.

Chief Bob Myles may wonder why the child was lured into a life of crime, but he doesn't discount the seriousness.

More than $1,000 worth of tackle and gear have been reported missing in the past month, including one box valued at more than $300.

So far police have recovered two boxes and are nowcasting about for their owners.

Court to Sit in U.S.

In what is believed to be a first in B.C. legal history, a provincial court will move out of Canada to seek witnesses and evidence in a trial of income tax charges against a North Saanich firm.

Provincial Court Judge D. K. McAdam, a court reporter, prosecutor and defence lawyer will go as a commission of evidence to four U.S. cities in September to gather evidence in the trial of Flying Firemen Ltd. and two of its officers.

Charges laid under the Income Tax Act against the company were read in provincial court April 3. Trial dates have not been set.

The commission will travel to Seattle, San Francisco, Los Angeles and Missoula, Mont., and is expected to hear five witnesses.

The first charge alleges that between April 1969 and June 1973 the company and officials Richard and Stella Mae Rude evaded taxes on $107,575 income earned by the firm.

Second is a three-count charge against Rude, that for 3½ years from 1969 on he evaded taxes by failing to file tax returns on $168,468 income, failed to declare income of $23,818 in 1972, and made a false statement concerning his income for 1972.

The final charge alleges that Mrs. Rude evaded taxes between 1969 and 1972 by failing to file returns when she had income of $40,470.

Old Warriors Look to New Home

By DEREK SIDENIUS

Old legions never die they just fade away . . . and emerge as something new.

Take the Britannia Branch of the Royal Canadian Legion as a case in point.

For the past couple of years members of that august group of old warriors have tried to find an alternative to their present location at 1616 Blanshard.

Manager Bill Kane explains the impetus in one word: Taxes.

"We've had to be realistic. The building is in a very high tax area. Quite simply we can't afford to continue living here."

In June their prayers were answered when a small Victoria development company, Garden City Developments Ltd., made an offer they couldn't refuse.

Last Friday the 2,800 members of the Legion ratified the sale. Only 14 votes were cast against the executive's decision to sell.

The deal, reportedly fixing a price of about $375,000, has some novel features.

First, the Legion will hold the mortgage for the next two years, and, except for the auditorium which will be taken over by Garden City Sept. 1, continue to use the facilities until July 1, 1976.

Second, the Legion will have either first right of refusal to be tenants in any new building erected on the site, or have an option to buy back space under the Strata Titles Act.

Kane says Brittania Branch, whose ordinary membership makes it the biggest Legion in B.C., doesn't want to move to a new location . . . and never has.

"The problem was finding another building in the same area which wouldn't cripple their finances.

"We've been operating at a deficit for the past five or six years," he says, "although we've been able to make up the difference by cutting into our savings."

The options open to the group, which has been at the present site since 1944, were to move, to amalgamate with another Legion, to stay, or to sell.

For a time they thought of amalgamating with the Pro Patricia and Naval Vets branches and moving into the old Gibson's Bowladrome building.

But it fell through when Pro Patria members voted against the plan.

President of Garden City Developments, T. B. (Borge) Larsen, says he hopes to erect a commercial building on the site, probably as a joint venture with one or more local firms.

An area of 5,000 square feet of the new building will be reserved for Britannia Branch.

That would mean a diminished size — it now has 12,000 square feet on three floors — but Kane is convinced members will be getting a better deal for their money.

"It will set us up for life . . . a nice club, a clean operation, with modern fixtures and equipment."

During demolition the branch will suspend operations Kane says.

Tennis Officials Seeking Loophole

LONDON (AP) — Tennis officials said Tuesday that South Africa, cold-shouldered by many opponents because of its racial policies, is within sight of winning the Davis Cup by default.

Italy has refused to play its inter-zone final in South Africa as demanded by the draw.

The other inter-zone finalists are the Soviet Union and India. The Russians have said they will not play against South Africa anywhere and Indian officials said a match against South Africa would be "very difficult."

Basil Reay, secretary of the Davis Cup, said after a weekend of talks with Italian officials that no progress had been made.

The Italians said they would not go to South Africa. The South Africans refused to switch the match to Rome.

Tennis sources said the Davis Cup committee cannot find a loophole in the rules that would permit the match to be played in a neutral country.

The match has to be played by Sept. 22.

Asked what would happen if all three opponents refused to play South Africa, Reay said:

"That is the 64,000-dollar question, the biggest question of all. "All I can say at this stage is that to have a default in the final would be a great tragedy."

GREEKS QUIT NATO

STANFIELD
. . . gone by 1976

Tory Chief To Quit

OTTAWA (CP) — Robert Stanfield announced today he will step down within two years as national Progressive Conservative leader and will not run in the next federal election.

He told a news conference after the first party caucus since its July 8 election defeat that he agreed to stay on for an indefinite period as leader after caucus members approved conditions he demanded.

He said he set three specific conditions on continuing on an interim basis:

—That he would not lead the party in another election unless one were called unexpectedly, ahead of the expected timing in 1978.

—That he be free to pick his own departure date on the basis of his judgment of what is best for the party.

—That he not be limited to any set period for continuing in office, such as six months or a year or some other fixed length of time.

He said his position was given broad general approval by the caucus, although consent was not unanimous.

"I did not expect unanimity; I did not demand unanimity."

Mr. Stanfield, elected leader in 1967 and defeated in three elections, said he made up his mind to resign well before the caucus meeting.

Having done so, he said, he leans toward an early resignation. But he would make the decision after assessing carefully what would be best for the party.

He said it is reasonable to assume that his departure will come before the next general party convention which must, by the party's constitution, be held by March, 1976.

The last convention was in March this year and the constitution stipulates that a general convention must be held every two years.

It also contains a clause for an automatic leadership review by ordering that a poll be taken on whether delegates favor a leadership convention.

Mr. Stanfield said he would quit and leave the party leaderless if he ever lost the substantial support of his caucus.

But he would not let a small group of caucus dissidents upset his plan to stay on until a leadership convention can be arranged.

Thanks A Lot, Dave

Sheila Hobbs of 674 Grenville had a few problems returning home from work Tuesday afternoon.

While driving along Esquimalt Road her car, "an old junker," stalled, blocking a long line of traffic.

She got out and saw "a big beautiful gold car" stopped behind her.

"See if our bumpers meet," the man in the car said.

They did.

He got her started, but the car stalled a second time, so he gave her another push.

This time she looked at the man and "could hardly believe my eyes."

"Thanks a lot, Dave," she called out with a wave of her hand.

Premier Dave . . . Barrett, that is.

Times News Services

Turkey overran much of eastern Cyprus today with massive air, artillery and tank attacks that levelled the industrial area of Nicosia, surrounded UN troops at the Nicosia airport and smashed to within five miles of the Greek Cypriot port of Famagusta.

The attacks all but cut Cyprus in two.

The United Nations announced a cease-fire had been agreed in the capital of Nicosia tonight, but firing continued after it went into effect.

The attacks brought Greece and Turkey close to war and threatened to collapse NATO's southern flank but Turkish Premier Bulent Ecevit, in announcing Turkish victories, said in Ankara he believed the attacks would not bring a Turkish-Greek war.

Greece announced it was withdrawing its armed forces from NATO for its failure to prevent what it called a Turkish Pearl Harbor, and Athens reports said the Greek army had been placed on a full war footing along the 99-mile frontier with Turkey.

The 14 other members of NATO pleaded with Greece to reconsider its action — which could mean the removal of U.S. nuclear deterrents from Greece — and called on Turkey to respect the cease-fire ordered by the UN security council. The pleas had no effect.

The Geneva talks collapsed early today and Britain called an urgent session of the security council in New York at 3:30 a.m. EDT. The council required only 120 minutes to pass a unanimous resolution asking for a cease-fire.

Dispatches from Nicosia and monitorings of the Greek and Turkish Cypriot radios there told of massive Turkish tank thrusts eastward from Nicosia toward the port of Famagusta and westward toward the port of Lefka drives that would seal off northern Cyprus and effectively partition Cyprus by military force.

Beginning at dawn, wave after wave of American-made Phantom fighter-bombers of the Turkish air force streaked out of the sun to bomb and strafe the capital while Turkish artillery hammered Greek Cypriot positions in the Kyrenian mountain range about 15 miles to the north.

The Austrian defence ministry announced that three soldiers of the Austrian UN peacekeeping force were killed in the air raid.

Radio Nicosia, monitored in Israel, also said Turkish planes bombed Famagusta.

Bombs burst through the industrial section at the east end of Nicosia. It burned for hours, sending up a tower of black smoke into the clear blue sky, and industrialists who took refuge in a hotel said the damage will cripple the island's economy for years.

The heaviest fighting centered at Mia Milea, two miles northeast of Nicosia, and near the airport about five miles southwest of the capital where strong Turkish forces cut off two vital road junctions and encircled the damaged installation, a UN spokesan said.

The eruption of renewed warfare following the July 22 cease-fire wounded 20 UN soldierd, including six Finns who have been under a constant mortar barrage at their camp

EXECUTIVE FLY GUN JUST $15

TORONTO (CP) — Tired of hunting flies with an ordinary fly swatter?

An item on display at the Fall Gift Show here may be the answer. It's an executive fly shooter, costing $15.

Shaped like a gun, the shooter is constructed so that a plastic fly swatter springs out when the trigger is pressed.

RECORD TOMATO GREW TO MUSIC

EASTBOURNE, England (UPI) — Charlie Roberts, 62, claimed a world record today for growing a tomato weighing 4½ pounds. Roberts said he encouraged its growth by fitting headphones around it and playing it stereo music all day long.

Air Crash Kills 44

PORLAMAR, Venezuela (UPI) — A Venezuelan commercial plane, carrying 44 passengers and four crew members crashed into a hill today while trying to land in foul weather on the island of Margarita. Initial reports said there were no survivors. The Linea Aropostal Venezuelana (LA) Viscount prop-jet had left Caracas' Maiquetia airport on a regular flight, making stops at two eastern Venezuelan cities before heading for Margarita.

$25 Million Issue

B.C. Hydro today offered $25 million in parity bonds carrying 8½ per cent interest.

In announcing the new issue, Premier Barrett said the government is actually reducing the amount of parity bonds with the $25 million issue, instead of the $50 million usually issued at this time each year.

More Ulster Deaths

BELFAST (AP) — A bomb exploded Tuesday at an army post near the border with the Irish Republic, killing two British soldiers and seriously wounding two others, the army said. The post at Crossmaglen had not been used for several days and the men, Royal Marines, had just entered it while on foot patrol, the army said.

Bottle exchanger Logie can't cash in

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

The deposit price for beer bottles, long 25 cents a case, is going to 60 cents, the Times has learned.

That makes 10 cases of empties worth $6, up from $2.50.

Buying 10 dozen beer now will result in a net profit of $3.50 on the bottles, when the price rises although it leaves the problem of what to do with 120 full bottles of beer.

One Victorian with a corner on the beer bottle market is not in a position to cash in on the price increase. Jake Logie, owner of Victoria Bottle Exchange, said he can only store 16,000 dozen empties at his depot at 640 Discovery Street.

Because he handles 70,000 dozen in a month, the bottles must go out to breweries almost as fast as they come in.

W. A. Bruce, chairman of the liquor administration board, confirmed that breweries are seeking an increase in the deposit rate for empties.

He said he expects the deposit rate to change at the time the cabinet rules on an application from breweries to increase the price of beer.

At present a dozen beer sells $3, with $2.75 for the product and 25 cents on the bottles. The breweries want the price to go to $3.55 a dozen, with $2.95 for the product and 60 cents for the bottles.

This might be rounded off to $3.50.

In Vancouver, spokesman for a major brewery said: "We are looking for a 60 cent deposit rate in September."

He said the 25 cent rate has been in effect since before the Second World War and no longer reflects the value of the bottles.

"Also a quarter doesn't mean as much as it used to."

British Columbia would become the second province with 5 cent deposit rate on beer bottles. Saskatchewan made the change to 60 cents a dozen on Aug. 1.

Indian Band Ringed

Times News Services

KENORA, Ont. — Armed policemen today ringed Anicinabe Park where militant Ojibway Indians defied a government ultimatum and continued a three-week occupation of the land, which they claim is rightfully theirs.

The next move is uncertain as the armed occupation of Anicinabe Park enters its fourth week. (Pictures, Page 3.)

The Indians say they will defend the park with the assortment of weapons they say they have.

But legal authorities say the amnesty protecting the occupying Indians from prosecution is over, and police will seal off the park.

Road blocks have been set up by the police Tuesday in their promised siege of the 14-acre park but the 150 or so Indians continue to patrol the park perimeter with rifles in hand.

The Indians, led by the Ojibway Warrior Society, have said they will defend what they say is their land.

The provincial government, however, has issued an ultimatum which expired at noon Tuesday, advising the Indians that unless they left the park by the deadline, criminal charges would be brought against them.

Four persons were arrested Tuesday as the deadline expired and they attempted to leave the park. But beyond that, the police have remained in the background, maintaining road blocks and patrols but staying away from any direct confrontation.

"What is left in the park now is the hard core," warned Louis Cameron, leader of the occupation.

"We have chosen to die here. This is our blood and our flesh."

Title to the park has been at the centre of negotiations so far. The Indians say the park land was purchased with Indian funds and sold to the town without authority in 1959.

KELLY, DOUGLAS PROFITS TRIPLE

VANCOUVER (CP) — Kelly, Douglas and Co. Ltd. reported record sales and tripled profits for the first half of this year.

The food manufacturing, wholesale and retail corporation that operates Super-Valu stores and produces Nabob brand foods, reported that sales in the 24-week period ended June 15 increased to $209.6 million this year, compared with sales of $131.5 million in the same period last year.

Net earnings were $1.567 million or 60 cents a share, compared with $553,000 or 21 cents a share in the first six months of 1973.

President Victor F. MacLean said the net margin of earnings rose to .75 of one per cent of sales from .42 or one per cent a year ago.

BOOK IN U.S. ONLY FOR CANADIAN HOTEL

WATERTON PARK, Alta. — Persons wanting to book a room at the Prince of Wales Hotel in Waterton Lakes National Park must apply to an office in Glacier, Mont., and a Calgary man is fighting mad about it.

Bill Perks, dean of environmental design at the University of Calgary, fired off a sizzling protest to Jud Buchanan, minister of northern affairs and Indian development, and he's set to raise a ruckus until he gets action.

Don Hummel, president of Glazier Inc., which handles reservations for six hotels including the one in Canada, said the Prince of Wales front desk staff would be "hopelessly confused" if room booking were handled otherwise.

A tourist arriving at an information office in the park can see the hotel on the brow of a nearby hill. But when he asks for a room he is told he must make a 45-60 cent call to Glacier.

72 Starving Stowaways Found on Banana Steamer

NEW YORK (UPI) — In what federal agents called "the largest roundup of South American stowaways in 30 years," some 72 chilled and emaciated Colombians and Ecuadorians were arrested Tuesday when the banana steamer "Santa Ilena" docked at a Brooklyn pier.

At least six of the aliens were sent to public health hospital on Staten Island for treatment of malnutrition and overexposure — the result of seven days in the refrigerated holds of the 12,000-ton Prudential-Grace Line freighter.

"Its the largest roundup of Latin American stowaways in 30 years in New York," a U.S. customs official said.

Dozens of customs and immigration agents boarded the cargo ship shortly after 6 a.m. when it tied up at Pier 39 on the Brooklyn waterfront, tipped by ship's personnel that there were stowaways aboard.

Ripping open hatches to the ship's holds, loaded with hundreds of banana stems from Ecuador, the agents were greeted by dozens of shivering stowaways, many of them wearing winter coats as protection against the chill of the giant refrigerators.

Fred S. Boyett, regional commissioner of customs, said others were found in the engine room.

Boyett said the vessel entered New York harbor early this morning under the surveillance of a U.S. Customs Service helicopter and a patrol boat.

He said the stowaways all from Ecuador or Colombia apparently boarded the ship at Buenaventura, Colombia and at Guayaquil, Ecuador, where the ship stopped to load bananas.

Customs agents said the crew first became aware of the stowaways when 10 men emerged from holds as the ship entered the Panama Canal at Balboa. The 10 were captured and put ashore.

When the ship reached the Atlantic, officials said, other stowaways were seen wandering topside. The ship then radioed New York for agents to provide help.

Violinist Virtual Prisoner

PERTH, Australia (UPI) — Russian violinist Georgi Ermolenko was a virtual prisoner in his hotel today because of the refusal of Australia's unionized airline ticket agents to believe he really wanted to go back to the Soviet Union.

Union officials said they would refuse to let him leave until he thinks it over for at least another 24 hours.

The 18-year-old musician insisted that he had voluntarily withdrawn his request for political asylum in Australia.

"Russia is my homeland and without my homeland I cannot live," Ermolenko told reporters through an interpreter. "I want to go back to my homeland."

The airline clerks for two days have refused to sell tickets for Ermolenko and other Soviet officials to leave Australia.

Ermolenko arrived Aug. 2 in Perth with the Soviet delegation to the Conference of the International Society for Music Education held at Perth University. Two days later he applied for political asylum.

But after a talk with his group leader it was announced he had changed his mind.

Airport workers refused to issue tickets to the Russians on both Monday and Tuesday.

"We are going to stick to our guns right down the line," said Jim Harding, an official of the clerks union. "We want him to have 24 hours on his own away from Russian influence."

Harding said he talked with Ermolenko and was more convinced than ever the violinist was under duress.

Ermolenko stared at him constantly, he said.

"I found it a traumatic experience," he said. "It seemed as if he had identified that I represented some ray of hope."
